spy plane with a similar outline. A senior Soviet air force general last night gave the first detailed account of the interception on Thursday of the doomed korean Boeing 747 by Soviet fighters, but did not say whether they had hit the aircraft. Colonel-General

Semyon Romanov, chief of the main staff of the air defence forces, said in an interview with Soviet journalists that the Korean aircraft was flying without navigation lights and did not respond at all to actions by our interceptor-fight-

When the Korean jet failed to respond to radio contact the Soviet pilot changed altitude and rocked its wings. It then flashed its lights at the jumbo crew, "but neither waggling nor flashing brought the necessary result",

General Romanov, whose remarks were reported by Tass. reinforced the theory of mistaken identity by saying that the jumbo was flying at night at a height of 8,000m (26,000ft) to 10,000m and that its outline resembled that of the American RS135 recoonais-

He confirmed that the Soviet fighter had fired warning shots with tracer shells, adding: "This is firing from an interceptor plane parallel to the course of an intruder plane." He said "rules provide for such a measure".

General Romanov said alr-traffie eontrollers in America and Japan had acted "strangely". The umbo was "stalking under cover of night above our territory" a deliberate action designed as a 'rude provocation". General Romanov said American worplanes, some launched from aircraft carriers, had violated Soviet airspace in the area of the formerly Japanese Kurile islands nine times this year and there had been similar incidents near Raumanov island in the Bering Strait.

The US Air Force and Navy were carrying out directly-sanctioned provocations to sow suspicion and mistrust between Russia and America. General Romanov's remarks were read out on the main television news bulletin. In the same broadcast a television commentator revealed that the

In the US. President Reagan is to make a nation-wide television broadcast tonight, in which he will set out action the US intends to take.

The President discussed a number of points with Con-gressional leaders who were briefed at the White House yesterday about the disaster, which cost the lives of 269 people, Mr Reagan told the Congressmen that his response would be "calm, controlled, but absolutely firm".

Despite the strong language used by the President to express his horror at "this murder of innocent civilians", the US response is expected to be restrained and largely limited to an international effort to condemn the attack and take measures to make it safer to fly nearer the Soviet Union.

According to US officials the President has dismissed suggestions that he should cancel the new five-year grain agreement signed last month. He has also ruled out any suspension of the two rounds of arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva According American sources, the US response would be centred on the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), a UN agency based in Montreal, and the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations. Among other moves the US is expected to make is to support an emergency meeting of thte ICAO to consider improved warning measures to prevent aircraft from straying into Soviet airspace.

In the White House it is recognized that the US still has to do business with the Soviet union no matter how appalled Amencans may be at the shooting down of an unarmed airliner and for this reason Mr George Shultz. the Secretary of State, will go ahead as planned with his meeting with Mr Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, in Madrid on Thursday.

However, the meeting is being shopened and Mr Shultz will use it primarily to express "a feeling of revulsion over the incident.

Murray confident unions will survive 500,000 fall in membership

role of the unions was launched long years our people and our yesterday by Mr Len Murray, economy have been bruised and general secretary of the TUC, as battered. Far from protecting us he reported a record loss of membership. There were no recession, the Government's grounds for writing the labour policies have only made things ent's obituary, he insisted.

Speaking at a press conference on the eve of the annual Trades Union Congress, in Blackpool, he dislosed a full of 500,000 up to the TUC-affiliated unions, but he argued that the unions would set to drop by about 500,000 again survive the present "hostile this year, taking TUC member-political environment".

Clearly anxious to dispel the growing view that the TUC is set for a permanent decline in its power and influence, Mr Murray claimed that the unions would merge from the present challenges stronger than ever.

The TUC conference, which opens this morning, will be the occasion for a sharp conflict over the labour movement's direction and strategy. Divisions oo this were reemphasized yesterday when delegates from the Transport and General Workers' Union voted to oppose talks with Mr Norman Tebbit, the Secretary of State for Employment, on his proposals to legislate on internal

The conference starts with what is likely to be a closely fought battle over the reform of the TUC general enuocil. Left-wiog unions want to scrap a five-year experiment that gives large unions automatic seats on the labour movement's ruling body, but the moderates are expected to fight off the challenge.

The oew system under which a new general council will be chosen tomorrow, will mean that the militants are reduced to about 51-strong body that will reflect the present disposition of member-ship rather than the historic manual roots of the TUC.

The transport workers will also seek to retaio two of their autonomous sections coveriog agricultural and textile workers as separate affiliates to the TUC, but a motion to exclude them from individual membership is likely to succeed, promptiog yet aoother constitutional crisis. If the land workers and dyers and bleachers are compelled to join the delegation of their parent union, the voting cards will be with drawn and composite motions in which they are participating will have to be rewritten.

Pensioners will turn and fight, Thatcher warned

By David Young

Mr Jack Jones, former general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, yesterday warned the Government that pensioners are becoming increa-singly concerned about the level ir state benefits.

Mr Jones, who is chairman of several pensioners' pressure groups, said at a TUC rally in Blackpool: "I warn the Government do not drive us down. Even the mock and mild in the community can turn. Pensioners who are prepared to be active in their own cause can do a great deal to bring home their case to

"Acting together, we could stop the traffic in many important areas, both on motorways and io our big cities. We would prefer to avoid direct action of that sort, and win our case by reasoned arguments, but if the Government and members of Parliament will to be taken. I believe that if we had to take action we would enjoy the sympathy of the public and, indeed the police? indeed, the police."

Mr Jones said that pensioners and the disabled are suffering a worsening of their standard of living. "They are to be victims of a deliberate fraud this November when pension increases will be about £1.50 a week less than the repeated promises of the Prime Minister and the Government, that our pensions would be maintained in line with the movement of prices", he said.

Mr Leo Murray, the TUC General Secretary, said that the money which the Prime Mlnister sought to "save" did not belong to her. It belongs to the British people and there was no evidence that the British people wanted to treat pensioners badly.

Coach fares cut in rail-road price war

By Michael Baily Transport Ediles

Inter-city coach fares, already less than half the rail fare on many routes, are to be harved this month. There will also be special cheap day returns of between a third and a quarter of the standard rail fare for pensioners. The new fares are being introduced from September 20 by National Express, the inter-city wing of the state-owned National Bus Company in an effort to boost midweek travel.

Passengers travelling on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday will be able to buy return tickets for the price of a single, returning either the same week or later. There will be extra benefits for young and old, and special cheap day returns will be available to pensioners without any evidence of identification or special travel card as is required on British Rail.

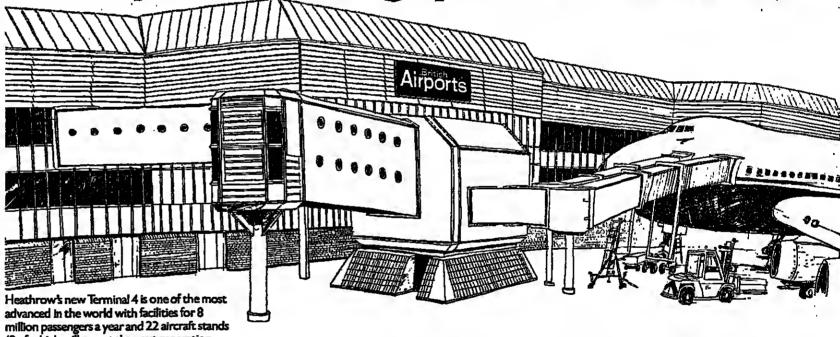

Typical of the new fares will be a £6.50 return Liverpool to London and £4.25 day return for pensioners and students. This compares with £15 for a return by coach before the road-rail fare war sparked off by the 1980 Transport Act. British Rail's cheap "favour"

The Transport Act allowed coach operators to start services wherever they liked at whatever fares they chose without any right on the part of established operators, including British Rail, to object to the Traffic Commissioners. Since then, coach fares have fallen hy as much as three-quarters, and inter-city coach travel doubled to 16 million passengers a year betweeo 1980 and 1982.

British Rail, whose cosis are substantially higher than those of the coaches, responded with a series of cheap "favour" fares and massive expansion in half-price railcards for pensioners, students

These are popular and have successfully maintained the volume of rail travel, but some British Rail managers fear that much of the traffic generated is being carried at a loss.

Water also kills. According to the Minister for Irrigation almost a thousand people have died in floods around the country since the rains began here at the end of June. He added that 8.3 million people had been badly affected by the downpours, while damage to crops and dwellings is estimated at 2,400m rupees (£160m).

One hundred people have died in Uttar Pradesh and 5,000 have lost their homes and 1,600 villages have been struck.

According to Mr Brahaspati Sharma, the Mathura district magistrate, 518 houses have been completely destroyed in his district, and another 4,200 damaged. Twenty people and more than 200 sucred cows have been killed.

Between here and Delhi the flat land is waterlogged. Pools of water, much enjoyed by the buffaloes, who dank themselves antil only their nostrils and horns show above the surface, slop agninst the road's edge.

At the height of a monsoon storm it seems impossible to tell where the rain stops and the flood begins. Sometimes the rain travels horizontally, whipped hy the wind into n wheel of water. Sometimes it ponrs vertically, in usands of square miles, with a relentlessness that makes it appear unending.

But the rain cools the land after the fierce summer sun, and after the fierce summer sun, and the monsoon season is welcomed as a hiessed relief from the heat of the plains. It stays damp for months, and the garden walls turn green with algae while the border plants grow like Quater-mass's monsters.

The government of President Habre said 15 of its soldiers were wounded, while killing 800 rebels and capturing 600, but diplomaic sources said the figures were exaggerated.

The Government and a French military spokesman here denied French aircraft took part in the battle, but in Paris military sources insisted that they did.

More than 2,000 French troops and eight war planes are in Chad to assist Mr Habre's forces. The troops were ostensibly sent to train his men to use advanced French weaponry.

The sources said the rebels may have chosen to attack last Friday because they thought they could do so without dragging in the French, who are mostly para-troops, with one company from the Foreign Legion.

The sources said they doubted the battle heralded a general offensive, as there were no immediate signs the government forces were following it up. But they were puzzled by the dec to launch an isolated attack.

Intelligence expert supports theory of computer error

according to Admiral Inman, a leading American intelligence expert.

In an interview with the Washington Post Admiral Inman, a former head of the National Security Agency who recently retired as deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said a substantial mistake was probably made in programming the Bocing 747's navigation system. "I don't know any other way this series of events could have occurred unless that happened,"

However other analysts have already dismissed this theory, pointing out that the airliner was equipped with three separate sets of shiphisticated equipment that were designed to prevent course deviation caused by a breakdown in one of the

They said it was unlikely that all three units were malfunction-ing and even if they were, the pilot had other ways of checking

One possible explanation which American analysts are studying is that the airliner might have deliberately tried to take a aircraft short cut through Soviet airspace. space. However Korean Air Lines Officials have rejected such a possibility, pointing out that all pilots flying on that route were well aware of the dangers of penetrating Soviet air space.

Analysts concede that the real more than 300 miles into Soviet airspace, passing over sensitive Soviet defence installations on the Kanchatka peninsula and Sakhalin Island, may never be known.

The Americans have been able to obtain only incomplete intercepts of the radio messages to and from the aircraft during the two-and-a-half hours it was off course. It is not expected that the ussians will be willing to share information contained in the aircraft's "black box" flight aircraft's "black box" flight recorder if it is salvaged from Soviet territorial waters.

In the 1960s robots were hailed as the answer to the problems of the industrial world. Today the experts are not so sure. In the first of three articles Piers Burnett explains why the march of the reliable cheap and accurate machine has been halted realistic proposition, it became fashionable to assess the international balance of power in demographic terms: a falling birthrate in one generation would, it was argued, condemn a nation to military impotence in the next. A single invention, the machine gun, sufficed to demolish

Spanner in the robot's works

But the theme has recently surfaced in a novel guise. This time the capacity measured is industrial rather than military, and the yardstick applied is not the number of young meo a country has available for military service, hut the size of its robot workforce. A recent publication by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development is but the latest of several surveys to adopt this criterion, and it is perhaps no accident that being photographed next to a robot now seems a more potent political gesture than kissing a baby.

By any standards, whether absolute or relative, Britain is doing badly in the robot race. In 1982 British industry was able to muster a paltry 1.500 robots compared with some 13,000 in Japan. This puts us roughly on a par with Sweden, with the difference that wheo the figure is related to the number of workers employed Britain had one robot for every 10,000 workers and the Swedes had 30 (1981 figures). Moreover, in the OECD's opinion. matters are unlikely to improve. If experience is anything to go by, it is the hig robot makers (the US,Japan and Sweden, in that order) who will continue to be the leading robot users.

ut before accepting a lack of robots as yet another symptom of industrial malaise, it is worth pausing to try to discover whether industry is likely to be able to turn ao unlimited supply of robots to our collective advantage any better than the generals. of 1914-18 were able to extract the anticipated victories from the millions of young men who were put at their disposal. This iovolves some appreciation of what a robot actually is, what it can, and, more importantly, cannot, do, and of the chances of robots widening their repertoire of skills over the next decade or so.

Conditioned by science fiction, with its cast of walking, talking mechanical men, we all too easily leap to the conclusion that, if a machine is dubbed "rohot", it must have a range of ahilities and an intelligence that approximate our own. In fact, as roboticists are well aware, attaching the label of robot to the kinds of manipulators that are currectly in use is an expression of premature optimism rather than a statement of real accomplishment.

in the eyes of politicians and others, may wear the halo of high technology,

During the nineteenth century, when mundane need. In the booming labour the use of mass armies became a market of the early 1960s it became increasingly difficult to find people willing to do boring, repetitive and unpleasant jobs. What was wanted was not a machine which could master elaborate human skills, but one which could provide the mindless lumpenproletariat demanded by mass production. As Joseph Engleberger, the founder of Unimation Inc. the pioneers of industrial robotics, put it: "...most manufacturers have broken down their processes into small elements. Each operator has to learn ooe sequence of operations, which he is then required to perform over and over again. The degree of skill is low and there is little

What had to be learnt, and proved well within the robot's capacity, were sequences of precise movement of the arm and hand ("end effector", in robotic parlance). Such sequences were relatively easily programmed into a computer memory, especially after the advent of the microprocessor freed robots from their dependence oo the giant mainframe computers of the 1960s. But however impressive, even uncanny, a robot may appear to the layman as it repeats a series of movements with flawless precision, it is in fact operating blindly and by rote.

Even roboticists can be taken in by the illusion of intelligence. The story is told of a Japanese roboticist who demonstrated his machine to a group of British scientists. The audience were electrified by the fact that the robot was, apparently, able to lob a ball into a wastepaper basket with unerring accuracy - in robotic terms, a prodigous feat. The astonishment was short lived. Ingeouously, the roboticist explained that, having trained the robot to toss the ball, he theo positioned the wastepaper basket to intercept it!

Repetitive manipulation is, of course, a skill common to many machines; what differentiates the robot is that it makes use of an articulated arm analogous to the human limb and that it can be reprogrammed to perform a whole variety of tasks without the need to redesign or adjust its mechanical components. There are, however, a limited range of applicatioos in which a manipulator arm, operating hlindly and without intelli-gence, is useful. Looking through manufacturers' catalogues one is struck not by the machines' versatility, but by the monotonous repetition of a sort of litany of robot functions: machine tool loading and unloading, spot welding, paint spraying and parts transfer being the commonest.

Whatever its task, a robot is dependent for its effectiveness upon a whole supporting cast of automated machines. Everything must be presented to it in consistent positions and The contemporary industrial robot, orientations; it can only operate in a world of guaranteed predictability. Indeed, to consider robots in isolation hut it came into being to meet a rather from automation in general is rather like studying an ant which has been removed from an anthill - it is an ingenious hut purposeless curiosity. The need to provide an automated environment has so far restricted robot different items, have little incentive to set up the paraphernalia of conveyors, jigs and electronic communication which a robot requires.

The robot's lack of intelligence also limits the use that can be made of its flexibility. It is, for example, perfectly possible to teach a machine to stack parcels oo a pallet, but this will involve parcels are predictably positoned. Moreover, the robot will have to be pallet, the second oext to it...the tenth on top of the first, the eleventh on top of the secood, and so on, hardly an effort to be undertaken in a factory where the kind of goods to be packed may vary from hour to hour.

Those who leap to the conclusion that the provision of more and more robots is a guaranteed elixir of industrial health should also be aware that there is a substantial body of opinioo which argues that, rather than being the universal worker of the future, the robot is oo more than a stop-gap expedient forced upon us by the limitations of insufficient and inadequate antomation. Automation, the argument goes, achieves its really spectacular successes when it abandons the attempt to do things in ways based on human skills and find solutions that are quite novel and intrinsically mechanical. Replacing wired circuits, which are fiddly for human beings and virtually impossible for machines to assemble, with printed circuits which machines can manufacture with ease is an obvious example. The need for robots arises, it is suggested, only because imperfect automation has left a number of gaps in the industrial scheme of things which require the particular skills of the human - or robot - hand. But this is a temporary state of affairs which will be remedied when a new generation of automated equipment dispenses totally with anthropomethic methods.

argue that the robot has the. of skills and intelligeoce so rapidly that it will outpace use to large scale industry, businesses any conceivable advances in auto-bewild such as specialist machine shops, producing small batches of many arguments in favour of "hard?" auto- But mation ignore economic realities. of premature obsolescence if products or methods suddenly change.

The robot offers a sensible half-way house; it provides an economic (and ensuring that parcels are of a consistent shape and size and that both pallet and parcels are predictably positoned. What has yet to be established is that laboriously taught to put the first robots have it in them to advance from parcel in the far left hand corner of the status of hlind, preprogrammed the status of hlind, preprogrammed serfs to that of a skilled and adaptive labour force, capable of learning new tricks and acting on their own initiative without the need for human tutelage at every stage.

In particular, hopes for the robot's survival as a distinctive species rest replace human labour in assembly work, an area of industry that has remained labour intensive and resistant to mechanization while being notoriously repetitive and "mechanical". Already robots have gained a toehold in assembly, especially in cases where products can be put together on the so-called "pancake" principle, which involves no more than placing one component on top of another and securing the whole assembly with a single screw. In the case of items which are to be mass produced it may well prove worthwhile to undertake the redesign of products in order to make them susceptible to robot methods. It is with applications like assembly in mind that many of the most recent additions to the robot menagerie have been designed specifically to replace, or work alongside, human workers, oc-cupying roughly the same space and having a similar radius of action; though, unlike a human being, the robot will require a good deal of hard automation to ensure that components are delivered in a predictable fashion. Another approach to the problem has been to incorporate the robot arm in a gainst this view are those who system which forms a self-contained microcosm, an area the size of a large potential to climb the ladder tabletop on which everything is positioned with guaranteed accuracy so that the robot is sheltered from the bewildering complexity of the factory

But if robots are ever to become a mation ignore economic realities, truly adaptive, general purpose labour ludustry will not be able to afford the force, and if they are ever to work kind of investment that is required to alongside human beings as "colinstall complex, special-purpose leagues" rather than tools, they will machines, with all the attendant risks have to acquire a visual faculty, an have to acquire a visual faculty, an ability to communicate in natural language and a level of intelligence that at least approximate human eyesight, language use and common sense. The chances of any of these objectives being achieved within the near future has, until recently, hinged entirely upon the chances of the digital computer, - the machine which provides the "brain" in all existing robots - mastering the kind of everyday routine intelligence which we, as human beings, take for granted. Unfortunately, though it is undeniable that computers can achieve a level of intelligence which far outstrips human beings in many respects, the signs are that they may not be able to master the more humdrum business of perceiving, understanding and coping with the real

> This failure, if failure it proves, will have implications that go beyond the purely utilitarian. For one of the more interesting questions in robotics is whether, by coupling a computer brain to a mechanical body, we can ceate an artificial version of the continuum of miod and body which lies at the heart of our own sense of mystery about our identity as living beings. In the long term, the possibility that the robot might offer a valid and intelligible model of man the thinker may be just as significant as its ability to substitute for man the industrial worker.

Enjoying a cultural jet lag

Edinburgh

By the time I read this I shall be back from two weeks on the Edinburgh Fringe and starting to catch up on two weeks' loss of sleep – a trip to Edinburgh at Festival time provides the most extended form of cultural jet lag known to man, and perhaps the most enjoyable. It is an experience which rather like the Notting
Hill carnival or going through Heathrow cannot adequately be described in words or conveyed to someone who has never done it.

One misconception should be cleared np though. We talk glibly about going to the Edinburgh Festival.
There is no such thing. There are only Edinburgh festivals. I don't just mean the division between the official Festival and the Fringe though I find to my surprise that I have been to nearly a hundred Fringe productions in the last ten years, but have never seen an official event. I mean that there are lots of festivals going on at the same time, which only intersect by accideot.

There is the Film Festival for instance. There is a folk festival going oo at the Aal Centre, which was not so called, as you might think, to get first place in the alphabetical listing, but comes from an old Scottish word meaning old. Actually they only come second in the listings; first place went to a production called Accoragh! which probably comes from an old Scottish word for pub closing time.

There is also a roariog jazz festival sponsored by Dryborough's Beers, and it is nice for once to come across a sponsor whose product is inti-mately concerned with the cultural event in question. Dozens of bands, " mostly trad, have been performing at dozens of pubs round the city and round the clock, turning the place in to a sort of Georgian style New Orleans.

The first group I caught was the Fred Hunt Trio backing Jim Galloway, a marvelous Scottish soprano saxophonist oow resideot in Canada, and the rapt attention of the beerclutching crowd would have done credit to a mime show audience onthe Fringe. (More than credit, in fact. Mime performers this year have added a lot of sound to their acts. David Glass's highly significant show, or what you and I would call highly pretentious show, was one of siest things on the Fr have even heard complaints that some cabarets are inaudible and some mimes are far too noisy, which is an interesting cultural develop-don't suppose that many jazz supporters have been to mime shows, or vice versa, nor that either of them have been to visit the Television Festival. I asked one televisioo visitor what was so festive about the Televisioo Festival and he replied, quite honestly:

'Nothing - it's just another conference. It's a chance to chat up people about jobs and it is also the one week in the year when we can get together and think about what we are meant to be doing in television."

he honesty lies in the clear admission ... that during the other 51 weeks they do not think about that kind of thing

In the years when I don't come to Edinburgh for the Festival or I should say festivals. I read about it from a distance and wonder what all the fuss is about. When I do come I wonder why life can't be like this all. the time: a kind of perpetual high,

Yet the meteorologists calculate that the amount of sunshine was less noteworthy than we who basked in it might imagine; 1983 looks like being only the fifteenth-sunniest summer this century. There was a depressingly long period when it seemed that even one of our typically depressing summers might never come. Wet weather took hold of the country on March 14, and resolutely refused to go away. In the ensuing 62 days the London Weather Centre recorded only six days free from measurable amounts of rain. More than six inches of rain, two-and-a-half times the normal level, fell in nine weeks.

Only the ducks and the bookmakers made sport of it, the latter offering 5-1 against two consecutive dry days. By mid May, flat racing had lost 26 day's meetings and £400,000 potential prize money; of 80 potential bours at Lord's 70 had playing hours at Lord's, 70 had been spent in the pavilion.

It was the wettest April since the London Weather Centre started collecting records 20 years ago, and May very oearly took similar dishonours. It was no use, the experts said, blaming the dust of distant volcanoes; it

For the months of March, April and May almost the whole country suffered undue rain, from 1 per cent above the 30-year norm in the celebratedly sunny isle of Tiree, to more than double in East Anglia. Everywhere was cold and dull.

Spring went out like a polar bear, with three inches of snow on the M40 in Buckinghamshire on May 21, and summer came in like a toothachey tiger with a burst of torrential thunderstorms on June 1. It could only

sideways look at the British way of life

More than a sneaking liking of cats began for me when my girlfriend's uncle, who was Something Big in Small Tools, tried to "master" her cat Tinker Bell: "You have to show them who's boss", said the small, fat man, "It's just a question of being firm." The cat, a Siamese, grossly misuamed and the only creature I have seen whose eyes could turn from china blue to dangerous red like Rikki-tikki-tavi in Jungle Book, looked at him in haughty disbelief.

Tinker Bell had a defence policy just as robust as Kipling's mongoose and was once seen riding a startled labrador down the drive. She treated all humans as potential vivisectionists and no one legs giving beneath him and smelling like a drain.

outside the family could pick her up without gloves. As we were in Yorkshire, Uncle donned a handy pair of wicketkeeping gloves: "I'll show her oot to dig up your lettuce", he said.

Such people hate rebels and all her life Tinker Bell was a crusader against the chintry sentimental image of Felix Catus fostered by the pet food industry, and even gave the vet a nasty nip with toothless gums when he came to put her down at the age of 19. She represented, in South Yorkshire at least, a campaign for real cats.

Not all cats are as forthright and honest in the loathing they have for humans and most owners are completely conned by their wily feline. The cosy ginger tom lolls around a hearthside looking as if butter would not melt between his fangs. But come nightfall Kittykins, or Pussywoo, or Twinklebottom, or whatever strange name his master calls him will be off through the cat flap embarked on a night of sex and violence which would have made Calignia blush. "Oh look, Kitty's been hunting again", they say when he returns in the morning, a glazed smile on his face,

Yet the country is going to the cats despite such antics. Nine million lurk in five million homes and the number, thanks to the grinning toms, is growing all the time. People buy cats in the mistaken belief that they are less expensive than dogs and can "stand on their own two feet". Most cats would find this very amusing.

There is little reason where attitudes to cats are coocerned and the world divides into cat lovers and cat haters, often violently. Was it merely coincidence that Churchill and Roosevelt in the last war liked kitties, while Hitler, Mussolini and Franco loathed them? Stalin of course was ambivalent, having had to munch his way through many a moggy in Siberia.

Cat lovers often cause havoc with their wills. The socialist mayor of San Roque, the nearest Spanish town to Gibraltar, is hopping mad he cannot buy the mansion of Mrs Diana Bretoo-Lee and turn it into a student centre. When she died in May she left-it to her 24 cats and there is nothing he can do short of provoking another Falklands conflict. They are mostly British cats.

Those who hate cats can be just as dotty. Wakefield Council actually banned an old lady from keeping 30 cats on the novel grounds that: They are attracting mice". The poor officials had obviously been watching too much Tom and Jerry. Or could it be they still believe all cats are really sorcerers in disguise?

The Royal Family has always loathed cats and there is not a single mouser below stairs at Buckingham Palace: but "staff are allowed private cats in the Royal Mews", a spokesperson pronounced. Any cat that took itself off up to London to see the Queen and found the Duke of Edinburgh in the gun room would probably end up on the wall. The only hope on the horizon is that Princess Michael of Kent is dotty about them. Queen Victoria installed a black pot cat on the Frogmore Mausoleum to keep owls away from Prince Albert.

If you want to stop the march of the cat, tiger dung spread on the geraniums, signifying the beast's territory, is the sure way. The trouble is you need to find a friendly tiger and it's probably safer to put up with moggy. Eveo Tinker Bell oever ate

We now have 48 wild cats and are the first people in the world to breed Geoffroy's cat and to hand rear we got married. My husband was a chef but we now run a boarding cattery and foster the kitten. BAST MASTERS Murry Hope and Patsy the Healer

Worship is perhaps the wrong word as we do not how down before idols. We believe animals have souls instead of the Christian concept that they are ready for the dustbin. The healing is based on mind over matter. We are not ritualists, although I am fascinated with ancient Egypt and have just written a book on it. Bast to usrepresents joy and happiness as well as caution and the maternal instinct.

We do psychic healing for small animals and sometimes people, working in little groups. Bast is the female cat deity and it's a religion much older than Christianity, but it is very gentle. We have had successes with something like cancer it depends on how far gone the animal or person is. We are very ordinary people. My husband is a sales director and I have four children and seven cats. There are lots of people who do worship Bast and although we are not in the ladies' lavatory at Paddington participating Christians, we accept the

I had always been more used to dogs and, of course, pigs than cats. But if you keep pigs you cannot afford to get too fond of them. However, when I divorced my husband I divorced the pigs as well, I didn't need to go around with bright plum nails anymore because the dirt really does get ingrained. Then someone gave me a cat, Miss Pigeon, who I became very close to. She lives in my Marble Arch flat with her daughter Miss Python. Just before Happy Family, the first play I have directed and produced, I took Miss Piacon to the vet's where she escaped into Kensington. We were in a panic and Nathan and I had 800 bandbills printed with her details on. When we got back home the telephone rang and someone had found her in Lexham; Gardens. You cannot imagine the relief, but then I was terribly worried the play was not going to be a success, because if you have a stroke of luck God can often pay you back. The play started in the hottest, slowest week of the summer but is fine now.

CLAWS 4 Neil Kinnock

We have two cats in our house in Etaling. The first one is called rluffy; that's the elder and my wife bought her in Blackpool in a pet shop £l at the 1980 Labour Party for £1 at the 1980 Labour Party Conference and there was a great debate. We could not agree whether to call her Fluffy or Claws 4. Fluffy is top cat at the moment and the other one, who is also black, is a replacement for Tinkerbell who died. When my daughter Rachel was very small she named ber after the Peter Pan fairy and she had to have a hell round her and she had to have a bell round her neck being a ferocious hunter. The new cat, Smiffy, has the habit of sleeping with bis legs stuck straight up in the air lying on bis back and is in endless disagreement with Fluffy. There is no indication they are going to get on. We have a policy of no appearement. I suppose it's not unlike political life, but I hope certain people are going to be more receptive. Cats, of course, are anarchists and no politician should try to learn anything from a cat. It doesn't stop you liking them though

We went skiing one winter and our Siamese. Pussy Foot who is very humanophile gets very cross if we go away. He is a phenomenal character and loves to be dressed up in the children's dolls clothes. He took off in a huff that winter with four other cats who spend the whole time outside and when we came back instead of a Seal Point Siamese we found he was jet black, which is very interesting. The colouration in these sorts of cats is due in an enzyme which is thermolabile. If they encounter low temperatures they turn dark all over, and it was a very cold winter. Cats are tremendously important in the burnan social chain and I know certain people who relate to their cats more than most other human beings. It is so nice for me to look out and see the ones who live in the garden, Peregrine, Prunes, Pluto and Pipkin, sitting on my car. They also do a gond joh keeping down the rais. I've inought a lot about cats recently as. I put myself in a mouse's place for 2½ years for a book I wrote.

Sorting out the Nacirema

Body Ritual omong the Nacirema (spell the last word backthe joke) and showed Americans to be a tribe of mysufying habits. No one knows this better than Miss Manners, alias Judith Martin, a widely syndicated adviser on enquette who tries very hard to kick the "Nacirema" tribe into some kind of civilized shape.

Most of the tribe's etiquette problems are self-imposed. Take, for instance, the muddle which results 'rom calling every eldest son after his father. Since Americans are a hardy bunch, four men, identically labelled, may be going about their business at the same time. To avoid opening each other's mail, they are forced to add Senior, Junior, 3rd and 4th to their names until one of them dies and they all move up a notch, causing a crinimal waste of personalized writing paper. Do they ask Miss Manners how they can best end the whole idiotic system by naming the next first-born son after a distant cousin? They dn not. What worries them is whether the personalized writing paper should be headed John Smith 2nd or John Smith II. (By the way, Miss Manners thinks the either is acceptable.)

At meal times, they make things difficult for themselves hy chasing their food all around the plate with a fork instead of gently guiding it towards the tines with a knife. They spread sandwiches so thickly that they have to be held together with toothpicks and are impossible to eat without harpooning the upper lip. Perhaps the reason they over-ice their drinks is to anaesthesize injuries caused by an inadvertent sandwich.

Although eating and drinking is such an uncomfortable process, Americans demand, and get. non-stop refreshment. Thoroughly spoilt by being offered both coffee and doughnuts during a business meeting, one of Miss Manners's readers complained about the lack of tea, Miss Manners considered the complaint reasonable.

Miss Manners is at her most censorious regarding her clients' verbal cusioms. She has her work cut out here because, unlike more developed tribes who merely make a little conversation from time to time. Americans communicate. Miss Manners takes a sharp line with people who say: "I've been on a wonderful journey of selfdiscovery lately, and I'd like to share it with you". She takes an even sharper one with those who invite their friends to "partake in a ritual celebration the congruence of their lives". She advises her readers that the proper word for curtains is curtains and not drapes, but allows them to say vase rather than vahz, which shows that she sometimes allows her heart to overrule her head. All-American sentimentality means poor Miss Mnnners must sort out behavioural problems which, with luck, will never reach our own shores. One such concerns the high school graduation. In this country, as we all know, the correct way to become a school-leaver is to slink through the gates on the last day of the last term. avoiding embarrassing farewell cer-emonics with those teachers lives you have made hellish for the past six

You then, with a loud cry of 'yippee', throw your school tie under the wheels of an oncoming hus. You are then considered ready for the hig wide world. This is not enough for Americans who insist on ceremony, invitations, presents, dances and silly invitations, presents, dances and silly clothes at every turn. The mere fact that they have a child who has become too old to stay on at school any longer lets them in for all sorts of arguments over who is to be invited where and with whom; arguments which we wisely defer until out child gets married. married.

Americans have a primitive need to celebrate, even when the event in question lends itself more properly to quiet contemplation. I do not feel that people about to get married for the umpteenth time should be seeking Miss Manners's advice about what they should wear on their latest wedding day. Rather, they should spend their every waking hour soberly asking themselves whether husband number eight can succeed in giving everlasting love when husbands everlasting love when husbands number one to seven have failed. If a wedding still seems like a sensible arrangement, it should take place without flower girls or fancy gloves.

Since we British have too much sense to partake in wedding showers or embroider initials on our face flannels or cat our salad before our mean, there is very little that Miss Manners can teach us that we really need to know. Even so, the English publishing house of Hamish Hamilton is publishing Miss Manners's Guide to Exeruciating ir Correct Behaviour" in its original American format. As a guide to correct behaviour it's useless, but as an anthropological study of George Washington's people, it's unputdown

Sir Peter Parker, who leaves BR this week, talks to Peter Hennessy

The sage of the train

Listening to Sir Peter Parker, probably the most articulate nationalized industry ebairman in the history of public enterp-rise, brings to mind George Orwell's description of England as "a family with the wrong members in control".

Why isn't he in politics? Sir Peter leaves British Rail at the end of the week to be succeeded hy his chief executive, Mr Bob Reid. Instead of grappling with what he regards as the most romantic of British industries (though not in the sentimental smoke-in-the-sky sense) for seven years, why was he not giving Margaret Thatcher a run for her money at the despatch "In theory I'm as apolitical as an amoeba", he said in a valedictory interview at BR's Euston headquarters. Then he proceeded to say what he would have done if he had been Prime Minister during the great 1973-74 industrial crisis: he would have set up an emergency council of industry to end the muddle of backstairs deals among unions, employers and government, an idea he refloated in March in his Dimbleby Lecture, Missing Our Connections, and which he will continue to pursue as chairman of Rockware and an active member at the British Institute of Management.

Sir Peter clearly cannot abide Thatcherism. He is well known in the public sector as one of her most severe critics. His Dimbleby Lecture was a striking cri de coeur against the prevailing orthodoxy. But though almost free of public office, he would not be drawn beyond an admission that it was "certainly a cri de coeur for values which do not seem at the moment to be centre stage".

His Dimbleby Lecture was an eloquent reprise of a view consistently held over 20 years. But it did not dent the shell of Thatcherism, For the hard men and women of the 1980s it could be written off, as Professor Ralf Dahrendorf once dismissed social democracy, as "promising a better yesterday".

Thatcherites regard Sir Peter as a hit of a beached whale. stranded by the receding tide of corporatism. Though he loathes the corporatist label, calling it "boring", he is an unrepentant believer in Neddy - the National Economic Development Organisation - the forum for tripartite discussions between capital, labour and government.

But could the British Railways board have won that battle without the prevailing climate of Thatcherism and the new industrial realism it has brought?

Sir Peter rejected that thesis vehemently. The board's efficiency strategy had its origins before the 1979 general election. He did not need the Government to stiffen him during last year's union militancy. He had not met Mrs Thatcher once during the struggle. No minister had given him instructions: "It is easier to have a strike than to manage change without a strike. Once you get a strike, it's very crude.

Sir Peter said bis failures on the railway outnumbered the successes. His greatest was that change had not come faster. "Hitting the buffers of the recession" had made matters difficult and caused projects like electrification and the Channel tunnel to be shelved.

Among the successes, which he insisted were the board's not his, he listed productivity gains -200 employees a week were leaving the railway and taxpayers were being saved £250m a year, a close relationship with the Department of Transport; into constituent businesses and bringing them closer to their markets; the realization throughout the railway community that they were not a monopoly and that they "had better sell with a

Sir Peter was flummoxed only once during the conversation when he was asked, who was the real Peter Parker? He's been described as a great actor, oldfashioned corporatist, inspirational leader, waffling wordsmith, and naive romantic who was mortified to find that not everyone shared his view of the railway as a family during the 1982 strikes.

He was furious at the suggestion that he was an actor playing a role (he has not trod the boards since he played Lear in New York in 1950). He certainly did not regard himself as a soft-centred manager devoted to the old ways. He had left the Labour Party more than 10 years ago because it never talked about efficiency and productivity.

How then would he like the obituarists to mark his passing? "I'd like to be remembered as a man who thought efficiency and happiness were reconcilable, as a man who noticed those he depended on and worked with".

The obituarists are likely to be tougher than that. Sir Peter is writing his memoirs, but perhaps the last chapter has yet to be written. Parker-watchers see him as natural SDP material. What alarms many Colombians is that the violence engulfing the region is all too reminiscent of the civil strife, aptly known as "lo violencio", which convulsed the country after the 1948 assassination of a populist Liberal Party leader. It took ten years and a rare intervention by the military until lo riolencia, an undeclared civil war between Liberals and Conservatives, finally blew itself out. One day a band of heavily-armed strangers drove into his village in Jeeps and handed out crudely-written cards, accusing the inhabitants of being communists and giving them 24 hours to clear out. They got out fast, since a few miles away they had heard how all the menfolk in one bamlet had been shot after rejecting a similar ultimatum. For some 20 years communist guerrillas of the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces (Spanish initials FARC), the country's oldest subversive group, have been active in the Magdalena Medio, justifying their actions as being in defence of the region's campesinos. At the same time, they have regularly kidnapped wealthy tandowoers, whose freedom has been secured only after huge ransom payments, while also receiving protection money from other landowners as an insurance against kidnapping, cattle rustling, or the destruction of crops. It seems that now the landowners are striking back with a vengeance. Worse, they have hired members of a much-feared right-wing assassination squad financed by "Colombian connection" drug racketeers to second city Medellin to do the dirty work.

This virtual private army has been staging a "clean-up" operation in Magdalena Medio and now claims there is not an Isquierdisto (leftist) in the region. Several Communist Party officials and members of a Maoist revolution party, which rejects the armed struggle and to which President Belisario Betancur's son belongs, have been murdered. But most of the victims are the innocent.

Concorde: slowing, but the idea could still take off

Until it was dwarfed by the abomin-able destruction of the Korean jumbo jet, the big civil aviation story of the week was British Airways use of Concorde as a crowd-puller in its war of the shuttle rontes with British Midland. This degradation of Concorde to a sideshow attraction - the equivalent of using a Derby winner to carry Lady Godiva at a county fete -marks the latest stage in the collapse of the high hopes once vested in the aircraft.

Concorde was conceived more than 20 years ago as the plane of the future. the prodigy that would whizz passengers around the world at more than twice the speed of sound. Yet to late 1983 there are only 12 Concordes in use, operated by two national airlines which were captive clients. Air France, once bighly ambitious in its use of Concorde, has abandoned its service from Paris to Washington, Rio de Janeiro, Caracas and Mexico City, and now flies only to New York. British Airways includes Washington as well as New York on its scheduled timetables, but has scrapped the Bahrain ronte.

Though others expressed toterest, only one other operator. Singapore Airlines, was ever involved in a Concorde service (jointly with British Airways), but flights to Singapore ended in 1980, less than two years after they began. While BA and Air France both claim that their surviving Concorde services are profitable, the alleged surpluses seem more the products of creative accountancy than net finanas they are with expensive, gas-guz-zling planes that 'hey would far rather be without. Yet C incorde remains the most glamorous commercial aircraft in the world. It is still gazed at with fascination wherever it goes, popular for joy-ride charters even when it is on one occasion when t travelled on the plane one of my fellow-passengers was an American astronaut who had actually walked on the moon, yet he visit Concorde's flight-deck. The trouble dogging Concorde throughout its bistory is that although it was conceived ahead of its time, it was out of date when it was finally brought into service. The plane took far longer to develop than planned. Intended to enter service in 1969, it did not make its maiden commercial flight until January 1976. At the time it was conceived it suited the commercial circumstances of the day. When at last it began carrying fare-paying ngers it was too ooisy (though no noisier than its contemporaries, as 1

Atlantic with a payload of 100.

By demonstrating that passengers could be carried supersonically. Concorde was a dazzling and unique technical success. TU 144, the Russian counterpart, crashed humiliatingly at the 1973 Paris Air Show, and when last heard of had been relegated to carrying freight. Yet Concorde is undentably an abject commercial failure. Production ceased long ago - indeed it was I who put a stop to it. When I asked my colleagues in the Labour government to allow an inexpensive study for a new supersonic airliner, they turned

I believe this was one of the fev mistaken decisions made by that Labour government. There is a widely accepted view that the unsuccessful Concorde experiment rules out com-mercial supersonie flight. My own opinion is that supersonie flight. having been tovented, not only cannot be disinvented but ought not to be disinvented. This summer I bave flown many thousands of miles, across the Atlantic and across continents. As I have struggled off the 747 or DC10 dirty, sired and jet-lagged, I have longed for the speed and convenience of Concorde. Countless other bedraggled, weary passengers would probably value it just as much.

All the requirements of a new generation supersonie airliner - greater size, greater range, quieter engine - are able: only the effort and determination to put them together are necessary. Costs, of course, would determine the feasibility of the project. That is why I believe that all the main western countries - the United States, Japan and West Germany as well as France and Britain - should unite 10 inance the necessary study.

Anyone who wants to bave a look at a Concorde can see a prototype at the aircraft museum at Yeovilton. Supersonie flight, bowever, is too important and too potentially beneficial to be relegated to a museum, or to stunts like buckstering the Glasgow shuttle. conference in Blackpool this week, what is their mood and where do they think their movement is going? Many, perhaps most, will be wholly occupied with the forthcoming battles between right and left, and the bartering and couoting of block votes in the Labour party leadership and deputy leadership elections. Others will be preoccupied with devising careful and suitably ambiguous wording to enable the conference to edge its way round several dangerous corners and stay in one piece.

But I hope that at least a few are filled with a bitter sadness: sadness that their great movement should have sunk to its present weakened state. For, when all is said and done, and all the tales of striking gravediggers and rule-book officiousness have been squeezed dry for every drop of antiunion sentiment they are worth, it is or at least has been - a great movement, with the proud history of courage and unsung heroes in the fight for justice.

This year - of all years, with growing poverty, threats to living standards, floundering businesses on all sides -the conference is forced to spend its time reviewing its own constitutional arrangements and political relation-ships. There will also be many discussions about discussions. Should we talk to Tebbit or not? Should we even discuss the proposals for trade union democracy? Can there be any hint or whisper of chaoge in our relationship with the Labour Party?

Probably, as before, discussion will be dominated by defensiveness, conservatism (with a small "e") and bitter in-fighting. Let us bope, however, that this might be the beginning of a constructive exercise in self-analysis, and not just a repeat of the old, failed self-justifications. Norman Tehbii will certainly follow the conference as avidly as everyone. He is playing an interesting game with the unions. The original policy of the 1979 Conservative administration was a straightforward union-bashing one. It landed them with an Act curtailing union powers which may be acceptable to public opinion in theory, but which could be a severe embarrassment to the Government if put to the test.

Mr Tebbit seems to have turned his back on that approach, and switched to a wbolly different approach, saying that what is wrong with the unions is not their powers but their lack of internal accountability. "Give the unions back to their members," be have cried. The public may have been startled at the implication - from a Conservative minister - that the unions were a possession worth having in anybody's hands, and sceptical about this sudden zeal for democracy.

What probably only a few people have realized is that the proposals, ringing slogan and all, are an act of unblushing plagiarism from the SDP's 1982 Green and White Papers on trade union reform. But like a bungling hurgler, stealing only half a custom-built stereo set. Mr Tebbit left behind those parts of the proposals that would have provided a convincing balance.

He has nothing to suggest about industrial democracy, strengthening union efficiency, bringing in sensible recognition, breaking down class barriers between white-and blue-collar workers. And, to their shame and discredit, the TUC has little to say on these subjects either.

But now there has been a further strange, development in Mr Tebbit's strategy. Whereas the Government's Green Paper proposed a democratic reform of union structures which, unbalanced though it was, was direct and radical - postal balloting for all union executives and general secretaries, and the replacement of "contracting out" with "contracting in" to the political levy - the White Paper that now follows is inexplicably fudged. The postal ballot has gone, non-voting general secretaries are no longer to be subject to democratic procedures, and the political levy is to be discussed.

What has softened the flint-like Secretary of State for Employment? Can it be that the shafts of the New Socialist editor Mr James Curran, who pointed out that the sort of toternal democracy Mr Tebbit is forcing on the unions is far from being practised by the Conservative Party, have gone home? Or has some secret deal been struck, whereby the Government would only press sueb reforms as would leave the present union officeholders in secure possession?

Tempting though these explanations are, there is another more plausible one. It may have finally occurred to Mr Tebbit that a really thoroughgoing reform of the unions — one that unshackled them from the dying Labour Party and gave them leaders with a true popular way that the popular way the popular way that the popular way that the popular way that the popular way the popular way the popular way that the popular way that the popular way the popular way that the popular way that the popular way the po with a true popular mandate - might actually produce a union movement actually produce a union movement that was more popular, capable, and threatening to the Conservative view of the world than the present TUC. It might actually start demanding action on that package of proposals Mr Tebbit left behind when be plundered the SDP policy papers. the SDP policy papers.

the SDP policy papers:

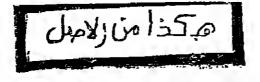

Are there any delegates at Blackpool dreaming of what might have been? Of what would happen if the TUC were, by a miracle, to say to Norman Tebbit:

"Yes, of course we welcome more democracy. If you'll pay, we'll certainly bave secret postal ballots for our executive elections. And we won't quarrel about the political levy: let's change to contracting in if it is going in be such an issue. Than's agreed! But now for the rest of the agenda: What about some real industrial democracy—from the employers as well as the unions? What about even-handed restrictions on company political unions? What about even-handed restrictions on company political donations? What about practical government belp to strengthen union structures and organization?"

Imagine the effect. The ground cut from under Mr Tebbit's feet, the need for some quick defensive thinking in the CBI and the Conservative Party, and – most important – an immediate image. And it is about time. They have made it too casy for too long for the Government to lay all the blame for Government to lay all the blame for the country's parious economic state at the feet of the workers.

BE FIRM, BE SCEPTICAL

If any good can come from last Western objection, which is that missiles in Europe. It had done week's criminal destruction of a South Korean airliner by Soviet fighters, it must take the form of a clearer understanding in the West of the nature of the Soviet system. This callous regime, which shoots first and asks questions afterwards, has served a timely reminder on the members of the Atlantic Alliance that if they do not hang together they may be hanged separately.

That is not a reason for abandoning the talks on Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces-(INF), which are about to resume in Geneva. It is a reason for approaching them with firmness, and for examining every Soviet proposal with caution, not to say scepticism.

The lastest public intervention by Mr Andropov is more in the nature of a clarification than a new proposal. He was already on record as offering to reduce the Soviet panoply of intermediate missiles in Europe to parity with the existing 162 British and French missiles, if the United States would agree to abandon completely its proposed deployment of cruise missiles and Pershing 2s.

One of the things Nato did not like about that proposal was that it did not make clear what would happen to the Soviet missiles once removed. Little would be gained if they were deployed against other allies of the United States in Asia, or simply removed behind the Urals ready to be redeployed at a moment's

Mr Andropov has removed that objection by promising that all Soviet missiles withdrawn under a new treaty would be destroyed. So far so good, but

and that parity between 162 intermediate Russian missiles in badly wavering ranks. Europe and no American ones is not parity at all.

But that is what Mr Andropov is still proposing, and be is still threatening that the introduction of any American weapons at all will compel Moscow to take appropriate counter measures".

It is this more negative aspect of his Pravda interview which has plunged Washington- into gloom and caused many to write off the concession on "liquidating" SS20s as a throw away line for public consumption. As the Russians still insist on concessions which they know to be unattainable the conclusion must be, it is said, that they are not particularly concerned whether they reach an agreement or not.

These who have been close to the negotiations argue that the Russians have become more, not less, intransigent since Mr Andropov's accession. He is now being blamed even for the collapse of the "Walk in the Woods" formula worked out by the chief American and Soviet negotiators. It was Mr Brezhnev who inspired the initiative but his successor, working behind

> That sort of wavering must be resisted. In fact, while failure to secure an agreement on the "zero option" (no Soviet and no American intermediate missiles in Europe) would be regrettable. it will not be an unmitigated disaster. That proposal was a concession by the West, and if the Russians persist in turning it down they will in one sense be doing us a favour, since there is an argument for stationing the new American missiles in Europe whether or not the SS20s are there - to fill a gap in the spectrum of Western deterrence and to make absolutely unmistakable the American determination to defend Western Europe against Soviet attack.

> Of course it would be preferable to avoid the deployment of such weapons on both sides, since both already have the capacity to destroy each other's population many times over with strategic weapons. But a continuing arms race with all its dangers is better than accepting an imbalance which would leave us at the mercy of the coldblooded murderers of Sakhalin.

INDIGESTIBLE ISLAM

Last week immigration policy was at the centre of political debate in both France and West Germany. The French left-wing Government announced tough measures against illegal immigrants, while in West Berlin the suicide of a Turkish would-be immigrant led to calls for the country: resignation of the right-wing federal interior minister, Herr

The immediate issue in the West German case is one of political asylum versus extradition. The protagonist in the case, Mr Kemal Altun, had asked for asylum, and the relevant office of the federal government had decided to grant it, but Herr Zimmermann had challenged lhis decision, arguing that Mr Altun, regarded by the Turkish Government as a terrorist, should be deported to Turkey "in the interests of good cooperalion with Turkey in the field of police-work".

That argument is not necessarily disingenuous. Both Turkey and West Germany have, or have had, a terrorist problem and it is on the face of it reasonable that they should wish lo cooperate in the anti-terrorist; but has come to terms reasonstruggle. The trouble is that the Turkish Government has a very much broader definition of a "terrorist" than any West European country, and at present allows much less political freedom, so that the distinction between "terrorist" and bona fide political refugee from Turkey is not always easy to draw.

No doubt the West German police are glad of help from their Turkish colleagues in keeping an eye on potential Turkish terrorists in West Germany, but it is probable that Herr Zimmermann attaches more importance to Turkish cooperation in attempts 10 limit Turkish immi-gration to West Germany than and an estimated 2.6 million he does to cooperation in policework proper. Moreover, his them French citizens, are "perdesire to restrict the right of sons of North African culture", asylum in West Germany stems not including the clandestine largely from the fact that this right has in the past been ment is now trying to round up extensively abused by immi- and deport. grants whose real motives are economic - though this was talist Islamic groups suppressed

Altun. Thus the underlying issue is indeed the size of West Germany's immigrant community, In and disorientation felt by many responses, to calls for a much more restrictive application of the right of asylum - notably from M Jacques Chirac, the Gaullist leader and mayor of Paris. But asylum-seekers are not the main problem in either The measures announced in Paris on Wednesday, like Herr in July, are directed primarily to securing the cooperation of countries of origin - in the French case Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia - in preventing illegal immigration. The French Government has also accepted, albeit reluctantly, the established West German practice of ran-dom and frequent identity checks on immigrants, leading to the summary expulsion of those whose papers are not in order. Inevitably such checks are inflicted mainly on those who look foreign", and thus contribute to the legal immigrant community's already acute sense of being a persecuted minority. France is a country with a long tradition of successfully absorbing immigrants. Germany is not, ably well with the Italian, Spanish and Greek communities now living in its midst. In both countries, it is the presence of a massive community of Islamic culture which is proving particularly indigestible. Frankly racist attitudes are becoming almost the norm towards Turks east of the Rhine, and towards Arabs (essentially North Africans) west

In West Germany there are 4.7 million "foreigners" - more than seven per cent of the population – of whom 1:7 million are of Turkish origin. In France there are 4.5 million people, roughly one million of immigrants whom the Govern-

> It is a very old problem in a w form. Should the liberal Western state insist on dealing only with individual citizens, freeing them from the tyranny of guild or sect (Rousseau), or should it recognize and cherish organic sub-loyalties and particularist identities as necessary components of a free society (Burke, Tocqueville)? To put it another way, where should one's. respect for the traditional culture of an immigrant community stop? Short of tolerating female circumcision or polygamy, most of us would say; but beyond, perhaps, arranging shifts and holidays so that pious Muslim workers can say their prayers at the correct time, and so on the haj. In between are vast grey areas: enforcing sexual segregation in state schools, putting up with nightly revels next door during Ramadan, withholding French or German literacy classes from women whose husbands object, and so on. . Most of these problems are familiar to us in Britain. All the major West European countries owe their postwar prosperity in part to immigrant labour, and none of them is actually prepared to do without foreigners in many jobs even in these times of recession. All have to accept that their "guestworkers" are mostly here to stay, and for a time at least will increase proportionally to the rest of society, thanks to a higher birthrate partly related to that indigestible cultural identity, but in large part due to an age structure which also makes the immigrant population a net contributor to the French social security system. (Those past working and child-bearing are left at home.) All West European peoples are bound to try to prevent more immigrants from coming in. All have not just a duty but an obvious interest to treat those already here with humanity and respect. A compromise between assimilation and identity can be found. But it will take time.

Call for a new building structure

From Professor A. Kennaway Sir, You report today (August 29) on yet another series of building failures, this time apparently caused by corrosion of the reioforcement in concrete.

In spite of decades of education of architects, civil and structural engineers and of myriads of other specialists and also of dedicated efforts to improve and set standards. huildings continue to exhibit faults of a serious nature. Many are apparent with traditional materials and methods. The use of modern materials is also a source of hazard, especially when misused.

Perhaps the very existence of fragmented education, institutions and organisacoo of the industry contributes in these faults, many of which are due to failure to understand the behaviour of matcrials and components in the environment of application as well as of their interaction.

Should we not reconsider an old ider of educating architects and all engineers and technologists destined for the construction industry together? Perhaps, too, some of the professional institutions could merge?

The practice of the industry could take more steps toward a unified operation. Subcontractors oced more competent, educated people, to work together more closely and to be integrated well. The best results are produced by integrated contrac-tors with every discipline in their employ and which are run by good project managers.

Few architects are good at project management; that needs to be taught explicitly, not left to be picked up anyhow.

Yours faithfully, A. KENNAWAY, Professor, Imperial College of Science and Technology, Department of Mechanical Engineering. Exhibitioo Road, SW7. August 29.

The Soviet challenge

From Mr Michael Cullis Sir, George Ignatieff's letter of August 25 makes it seem longer than 20 years sioce he was Canadian representative to Nato.

While he is, of course, right enough in urging increased Russian studies in Western universities, why should it apparently be assumed that these must lead to greater sympathy and cooperation with the Soviet regime?

· As to what he raildly describes as the "problem of nationalist feelings among Soviet ethnic minorities". bow does he see Western "cooperation" conducing to resolve this?

The simple, and ultimately sole, answer is for the Soviet Unioo to give nations like the Baltic states back their liberty. Mr Ignatieff also seems to misioterpret the kind of cooperation envisaged in the Nato "Wise Men" exercise of a quarter of a century ago, which was concerned to promote non-military cooperation between members of the Alliance, ool with the Soviet adversary. .

It may indeed be that Mr Ignatieff is only seeking to make similar points to Lord Carringtoo in his admirable Noto Review article (summarised in your issue of August 29) hut, if so, he has introdoced a certain confusion into the argument.

Yours etc. MICHAEL CULLIS, County End, Bushey Heath' Hertfordshire, August 29.

Grey area' of power

From Mr Paul S. Bagshaw

Sir, Peter Hennessy's article (August 30), misleadingly entitled "Order without armed force", reports Sir Edwin Bramall's views on military aid to the civil power. With better training and equipment since the 1981 riots the police have, he feels, effectively filled the "grey area" before the army are called out.

Yet the true "grey area" is not here but in the overlap of the police and Armed Forces. Joint Army and police actions (at Heathrow, in Tactical Aid Group training, in Northern Ireland), the increased arming and technical sophistication of the police have widened this

Finally, the US hishops (1) rule Sir. Clifford Longley ("US bishops enter the 'bomb' debate", August 29) out all use of ouclear weapons pastoral letter of the US Roman Catholic bishops. "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and our 147-8); (2) reject any "first use" (paras 150-156); and (3) express profound scepticism about the possibility of "limited" nuclear Response", as "impressive and, in its own cootext, likely to be epochexchange (paras 157-161). They conclude that "the first imperative is making". Moreover, this is, as he points out, largely because it was to prevent any use of nuclear publicly debated and thrice revised before being issued in final form.

By contrast, The Church and the Bomb was indeed just one input to a It is against this background that their acceptance of deterrence is to be evaluated. Their position is clear (paras 173-176). It is that of Pope wider public debate to which other churches in this country have also John Paul II given in two pro-nouncements last year: "deterrence based on balance, certainly not as an coorributed. It would be a help to many Christians if, on the basis of the work already done (including the American statement) and of the end in itself but as a step on the way nowards a progressive disarmament may still be judged morally accept-able:" and "the logic of nuclear deterrence cannot be considered a discussion evaked, a shorter agreed ecumenical document could be produced by all the British churches concerned.
Your readers may, however, be misled by Mr Longley's article on two central issues. First, he makes no mention of the crucial final goal or an appropriate and secure means for safeguarding international peace."

The message of the US bishops and that of The Church and the Bomb are basically one and the same. The use of ouclear weapons is morally unacceptable. These weapons must go. "Deterrence" is justifiable but only as a temporary holding operation nn the way to disarmament. (To say that The Church and the Bomb declared all nuclear deterrence "forbidden" in the present situation is simply untrue.)

Any government, therefore, not urgently putting maximum thought and effort into disarmament as a tnp priority is morally at fault in its possession of nuclear weapons. Yours faithfully. TJOHN SARUM, Sir, As part of the poverty lohhy referred to hy David Walker (feature. August 25) the noise to which we are contribution is for sufficient public expenditure on the poor as opposed to "extra", with the implication that already enough is being committed.

The poverty lobby will remain morally indignant where the propaganda of the right conveys the message that it is the fecklessness of the poor which is the target for action. The propensity for hlaming the victim is always with us and seemingly more so in Mrs Thatcher's Britain. Yet, as last year's Government-sponsored Report on the Role and Tasks of Workers affirmed: The Social social services contribution seriously under-financed and regrowth until a plateau of basic provision is reached". This needs to be coupled with that part of the MORI poll (not mentioned by Mr Walker) which uncovered widespread poverty of the old-fishioned, absolute kind. Cathy, therefore, has good reason to come for a handout - even skilful managers need basic resources to be successful - hut the particular cupboard of many social services departments is looking increasingly Nineteco-sixty style social work ought not to differ from the 1980's form in that any competent social worker should form an assessment of the help needed through weighing the effects of environment and personality. Increasing self-reliance and the capacity of people to cope is the end we in social work share with the Prime Minister, but we differ markedly from her over the means.

However, if it really is the case that, as a society, we have less money available to order to spend our way out of the continuing problem of poverty, contrary to what Mr Walker says, we in social work have begun the serious business of thinking of oew ways of combating the problem.

The America's Cup

From Mr John H. Wiley

Sir, The America's Cup, in the sad absence of the boat herself, is a symbol of American pre-eminence in a particular sphere, demonstrated at a time when the United States was a young namini.

I am unmoved by the thought that the trophies of Henley and Wimbledoo regularly leave these shores, but if I were an American I should be in favour of an early amendment to the Constitution to ensure that the America's Cup would always remain the property of the United States.

North American genius produced the fast sailing ship. Every modern sailing boat owes something, in its hull or sails, to "America", just as sailing boats a hundred years hence will be the better for the efforts of the English, Australian, Dutch and Italian designers working on the challenge and Americans working on the defence.

Unfortunately, controversy over rules is boring. Endless elimination

Complaints and press freedom and have not found majority

From the Editor of The Observer Sir. As a working editor one reads with wry amusement, tinged with exasperation, the various remedies" proposed for the press. In today's Times (September 1), for example, a fellow editor evidently views with equanimity the idea of TUC-inspired "artificial restraint" upon national newspapers (including, presumably, The Times, The Guardian, the Daily Telegraph, The Observer and the Financial Times) as long as the Newbury Weekly News and similar publications are excluded from these controls on grounds of special virtue.

Then Lord Briginshaw declares that "something must be done to abate the excesses of some sections of the press". It turns out, however, that he isn't referring to the section of the press over whose excesses he himself presided for so many years, but to the introduction of forms of "coercion" by which the NPA and the Press Council, rather than editors, would determine what readers should read.

Having recently been censured by the Press Council myself, I can vouch for the weight its judgments carry with serious journalists. But the first object of the Press Council, as stated in its articles of constitution, is "to preserve the estab-lished freedom of the press". That means defending the press as well as condemning its excesses.

The Press Council could only exercise the regulatory functions being wished opon it by abandoning that primary objective - and with it the allegiance of editors, on which, io a free society, its effectiveness has

Teenage pregnancies

From Mrs P. D. Riches

Sir, Your report "Fewer teenagers pregnant" (August 16) has been drawn to my attention for comment since it cootaios some misleading conclusioos. I should appreciate the use of your columns to correct these.

Your report states that the number of teenage girls with uowanted pregnancies has fallen and that abortions have only slightly increased. Statistics from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys reveal that the total number of births to 15-19 year olds dropped from 81,797 in 1970 to 61,036 in 1980, However, the rate of illegitimate pregnancies per 1,000 girls resident in England and Wales in the 15-19 age group rose from 20.7 in 1970 to 29 io 1980.

During the same period the rate of abortions in this age group almost doubled from 9.05 to 17.64, while in the under-16s the rate increased from 2.7 to 4.6. There is overwhelming evidence that, contrary to what you might expect, the availability of contraception contributes to an increase in the abortioo rate, giving the lie to those who say that sex educatioo reduces unwanted teenage pregnancies. Yours sincerely.

Loss of farmland

From Professor Robin Best Sir, Your report (August 24) of my talk to the British Association correctly notes that the annual loss of farmland to urban growth has been reduced by some two-thirds since its peak in the 1930s. But the reasons for this are not stated.

The decline has come about largely by the careful operation of protective planning cootrols since the 1947 Town and Country Planning Act. lo the past few years the dampening effects on developmeot of the present recession have resulted in a further fall.

The danger now is that the recent weakening of planning constraints by the present Government, in conjunction with increased urban pressures as the economy improves, could quickly lead to a new npsurge io urban encroachment. Yours faithfully.

It is bad enough, for most of us, trying to remember the same date each year for 20, 30 or more years. Random celebrations of a third, sixth, seventh, eighth or ninth of a century, occurring at different seasons of the year, would impose yel further strains on the institution of matrimooy and set appalling precedents for the birthdays of indigents or sociable offspring.

Body and mind From the Reverend J. N. A.

Bradbury Sir, I am glad to learn from Professor Weatherall (August 29) that the doctors of tomorrow will be "increasingly aware of the pastoral narrow the gap between ourselves aspects of their work and the importance of their patients as individuals with personal and environmental problems."

When I first came to Tottenham four years ago I founded, with the United Reformed Church minister, a multi-agency group to meet every two months for interdisciplinary discussion of the local area's problems. The group has been well attended by social workers, community workers, teachers, the police, health visitors and others. But though health issues frequently appear on the agenda no doctors ever come Concerned by the extreme isolation in which it seemed to us the doctors were working, the group decided to discuss how we could and the doctors. I wrote personally to the 45 doctors of our area to invite them to the next meeting. One doctor came. Two apologised. None of the others replied.

I assumed our area was excep-

The manifestation of myths

It is a strange accident of history that the issue of justification by faith hos found its way back on to the theological agenda just as the agreed with him that current Christian world begins to celebrate the five hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther in November, 1483.

The Roman Catholic Church's The issue has been out of fashion a long time, and it is entirely to the credit of Protestant Evangelicals. Anglican conserva-tives in particular, that it is beginning to receive the attention it deserves.

The field is littered with myths.

A service of thanksgiving for the life of Lady Alpon will be held at St James's Church, East Hill, Colchesand little else. Only when they are cleared will the significance of the doctrioe begin to be felt. It is not necessarily divisive, nor necessarily the "Protestant versus Catholic" issue that popular myth says it is. All the churches could do with a dose of it; all the different manifestations of Christianity seem to suffer equally, in the present day, from the spiritual consequences of its neglect.

Luther accused the Roman Catholic Church of his day, and the papacy in particular, of preaching salvation through preaching "salvation through good works". He was so adamant on the point that in his translation of the Bible, he added the word alone" after St Paul's famous phrase, and so "justification by faith alone" quickly became a slogan of the period.

What is often forgotten, however, is that many theologians of the time, Erasmus included, agreed with him that current church practice was tending to

The Roman Catholic Church's considered response to Luther was not to repudiate salvation by faith and insist upon salvation by good works, but to accuse him in turn of preaching salvation by good works in a different form, contrary to the Gospel, He had made faith, it said, a "Great Work".

A true reconciliation is possible, because neither tradition teaches other than "salvation by grace alone"; that is to say that God's action in saving a soul is "free, gratis, and for nothing", and man cannot secure it for himself by his own effort however worthy he may be. Neither side maintains, however, that morality therefore flies out of the window, although that was part of the church's counterattack on Luther, another myth, this time on the Catholic side. There is further potential confusion because of slightly different usage of the various technical terms, justification in theology more to a process. Even salvation with gritted teeth. expressions such as "grace" have different nuances of meaning in different traditions, and "faith" has a secular meaning 100.

Each religious system, iocluding monotheistic religions outside the Christian one, do seem to suffer from a permanent tendency or temptation to exalt good works at the expense of faith. Faith itself, in the Protestant tradition, tends to be corrupted into o striving to believe by an effort of will, rather than humble trust. In popular culture the very word "faith" is taken to refer to an irrational opinion that God exists, in defiance of the evidence of the senses that he does not, and this development of meaning has been sucked into the notion of justification by faith. Luther would have been appalled, and so would his adversaries.

There are parts of the contemporary Roman Catholic Church which appear to be specially prone, likewise, to encourage a frantic striving after righteous-ness. One theological objection to the Opus Dei movement is that its spirituality demands great efforts of will.

That is a feature of many of the contemporary cults: religions "of works" seem to produce up-tight personalities who work for Protestant theology referring more to a point in Catholic

There is a psychological parallel at the level of relationships between people: there are those who can accept love, and those who must struggle to earn it, otherwise they could not trust it. Manipulation of the object of love, to gain, possess, and control it, has its fruit, at the religious evel, in the religion of works.

It was Luther's emphatic point that God is not impressed, flatttered, or bribed into putting salvation in man's way, and to seek to do so is in effect to reject what is really on offer. His corrective to that striving and straining was to underline man's weakness and poverty for which no effort of his own could

Each Christian age has its own characteristic ways of veering towards heresy, and the neglect of the doctrine of justification itself suggests that present day heresies lie in that direction.

If Luther's teaching could be taken out of the arena of theological contestation, and accepted as a warning applicable to all the present forms of religious life, including those which regard themselves as Luther's only true heirs, his five hundredth hirthday would be well

Sponsors for serious authors?

Nigel Viney, until recently, was Heinemann's production director. That is, he was responsible for That is, he was responsible for paper and printing and binding. He has now started working partitime for the Society of Authors, founded 99 years ago, to dream up ideas to help the book writers' union and its 3,000 members union and its 1004 centenary. cclebrate their 1984 centenary. One of his first suggestions, and it could only emanate from a sometime publisher, is that big business should sponsor authors. Thus, in addition to filling the coffers of the Conservative Party. assisting an opera at Covent Garden and a play or two for the RSC, backing yet another cricket competition and making a donation to a charity of its choice. Moneybags Ltd can back an

The idea is not, in fact, that the business or industrial sponsor should obtain a piece of the action in Jeffery Archer, Barbara Cart land or even Graham Greene or Salman Rushdie, but in the kind of serious, non-fiction writer almost definitely it will not have heard of, or at least read. For the projected authors are those who receive modest advances and royalties from imprints such as Oxford and other university presses, Martin Robertson, Harvester, Croom Helm, Macmillan Academic, Routledge & Kegan Paul, Allen & Unwio and Pergamon. Between them, these houses bring out the majority of what are sometimes taken to be serious contributions to scholarship and learning if not necess-

I do not believe that Money-bags Ltd (who, let us say, manufacture a wide range of industrial products) would att-empt to nohile and influence writers they were persuaded to sponsor, though that is a danger which worries authors. I simply question what sponsoring com-panies would gain from the arrangement, unless they were to receive a percentage of the royalties if authors did better than anticipated. Kudos to directors and shareholders may be derived: from sponsoring yet another cricket competition but it would really look good in, say, Player's or Rothman's annual report if they had sponsored a biography of a medieval anchorite by Professor Pilsner or a study of the linguistic patterns of the Aborigioes by Bruce Mackenzie, Ph D.

The Society of Authors Is, at present, run with vigour, bumour and style by a solicitor. Mark Le Fanu. He has only been in the joh for a few years, and still retains the benefit of enthusiasm plus a real commitment to the wellbeing of writers. His predecessor, David Machin, was a publisher who left to become a publisher again. Anthors tend not greatly to benefit when publishers turn philanthropist and propose schemes for their well-being. Mr. Viney, who hails from a successful printing family, no doubt means well but it would take a publisher to suggest that people other than publishers should back authors financially.

Publishers, now as ever, are in the business of publishing for one of two reasons, or a combination of both. They glean a frisson from and ideas, and they can practise that pleasure for a living in a ing from day to day with a myriad different matters - whatever publishing may yield as an occupation for gentlemen and, increasingly, ladies it is hardly boring - or they see it as an easy way of making a reasonable income as most (other) people in the profession or trade are still fairly unbusinesslike.

The wrong organization is employing Mr Viney. It should be the Publishers' Association. The sponsorship of individual impovcrished writers rather than of publishers would be but a further humiliation to professional authorship, another nail in the battened-down coffin. Arts Council awards and grants from affluent foundations already allow publishers to pay the primary producer less well than they might and should, and sponsorship would intensify that process.

The sponsored book is already more common than we sometimes realize, although sponsor- was transformed. The stage was ship - for obvious, prosclytizing surmounted by a carpeted dais; reasons - is often hidden or the air was heavy with the scent of disguised. But sponsorship should be of publishers, and the fact taken their 1960s gear out of should be acknowledged ad-cquately on the books. Mr Vmey and the Society of Authors should Indian night at the Proms. be thinking of ways in which the publisher - the author's employer, after all, even if he does not pay for the insurance stamps - can sell more books, and thus pay authors higher advances and better

It should not cease to astonish that the author is thought to be doing well if he receives 10 per cent of the published price, the bookseller doing badly if he obtains less than 35 per cent discount. The bookseller has higher oveheads? He also has thousands of books to sell at any given time, the author only one.

When Andropov fell ill his former rival for the leadership. Konstantin Chernenko, made a key speech attacking bberal intellectuals. Chemenko is still in the ascendant and Piotr Demichev, the Minister of Culture and a former chemical engineer as Lyubimov delights on pointing out, has high-level backings for his meddling. The mystery of why Lyubimov, at this low point in his relations with the authorities, was allowed to come to England may be explained by a feeling that he is

The banning of Pushkin's play was extraordinary. It is a central work in the Soviet pantheon of approved literature. Lyubimov had however made one charac-teristic change. In the play a Boyar upbraids the complacent Russian masses for doing nothing. He asks them: "Why do you remain silent?" Lyubimov's version had the same actor, this time auditorium at the end of the play and asked the audience: "Why do 1204 remain silent?"

He could, of course, soldier on in spite of the censorship, but he has decided to stand his ground. "Neither I nor the theatre can imagine continuing our work without these three productions. Without them I cannot work, I cannot allow myself to be trampled underfoot. Yes, it is very serious.

April 23 next year marks the twentieth anniversary of the theatre. So these functionaries their relationship with us. The present conditions they have created mean that my work is impossible and I have told them so. I've offered my resignation. There is no reaction from Andropov. He has neither confirmed or denied it so I continue firmed or denied it so I continue to work. They asked me what solution do I see to the present situation and I said the only solution I can see is my retirement. My offer was not accepted, I am a man of firm discipline and therefore I continue to do my work." So Lyuhimov, his Hungarian wife Katalin and four-year-old son Petya, came to England with his resignation on Andropov's desk and the fate of his theatre and creative life hanging by a thread. It is not the first time he has clashed with the authorities in an international context - the stopping of his production of The Queen of Spades from going to the Paris Opera severely dented Franco-Soviet relations. But it is morally upright and very honest unquestionably the most serious writers who are still living in the international exposure is good for there are other people, careerists, him to the extent that he can rises in anguish as he speaks of his cult figure among Russians who humiliation at the hands of the chinorniki.

The problem of the chinomika is made more complex by the fact that his words are suffused with the fire of Russian patriotism.

"It's a simple matter: I was brought up in the moral values of our great Russian culture." I point to the two crosses hanging round his oeck.

Lyubimov speaks of a Russian tradition, uninterrupted by the Revolution, and of Stalin's attempts to crush it. "He managed to have Mandelstam killed but he did not have Pasternak killed. Crine and Punishment is, of course, one of the high peaks of that tradition.

Predictably Lyuhimov ran into trouble with his version. He offended Russian schoolteachers with his absolute opposition to the central character Raskolnikov and the justifications he offers for

"I think Dostoevsky would approve of my conception. All his works were directed to the good, to love, to firm moral principles. He turned out to be prophetic. He saw what was very difficult to see, what only came out in glimmers. He saw the assertion of the individual at the expense of his neighbours. The gradual loss of moral values. The world is in crisis now. What we can expect from that is hard to say. I hope for a gradual recovery because there

"I can understand all these things I have said may not be particularly appealing to the officials, but I am an old man and I feel that they should get used to a normal dialogue. I don't think they will change. The ones I have in mind are the ones who control the theatre. Most of them simply have to be replaced by more humane and educated people. They're incompetent in the arts."

The central image In Lyubi-mov's production is that of a door. It is an image of a change of state from one form of knowledge to another, from one argument to its opposite, from damnation to salvation. In the Taganka production one door opened on to the real street. Such images of transition are characteristic of the tradition, of which Lyubimov is a part, of a fugitive art, bruised hy totalitarianism and forever hav-ing to switch from assault to persuasion, from hitterness to

Songmakers' Almanac

Wigmore Hall

A song biography of Reynaldo Hahn, as it was described, became an evening of diverting pleasure on Saturday when the Wigmore Hall reopeced after its summer closure. Fresh from their Edin-Mahler, noted on this page last Friday, the members of Song-makers' Almanac offered their portrait in words and music of an engaging petit maitre under the title of his precocious Victor Hugo setting. "If my verses had wings", composed when he was

This and other songs, interspersed with some by his teachers (Gotmod Massenet) and contem-poraries (Saint-Saens; Faure) were strung on a thread of anecdotes and commentary spoken by the singers and the pianist, Graham Johnson, who compiled it. Together they sought the retrievable memory of a composer who was Venezualan by birth and Freach by adoption, and whose unpretentious and acutely poetic flair graced the song and theatre repertory with civilized elegance.

What emerged most promineutly was Hahn's skill in evoking time and place other than his immediate milien. His songs in the renaissance manner such as "Chloris" stylishly sung by Richard Jackson and the Troubadour verses of Charles of Orleans, were the most attractive kind of pastiche, while the Venetian dialect and its "eternal adolescence" as Hahn described it, prompted songs of lyrical ardour which be himself once sang while Goodola-borne among

Here they were given exquisitely felicitous sentiment without the least indulgence by Anthony Rolfe Johnson, whose subtlety of vocal colour also movingly enriched the "Autumn Song", from Chansons Grises, Hahns remarkable teenage settings of Verlaine. The other singers in these and the remaining items were Patricia Rozario, an oddiy deen soprano who was only intermittently expressive, and Martyn Hill, placidly genteel even in the heartfelt poignancy of the Gautier setting "infidelite".

Venice film festival

Last year the Venice Film Festival celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. This year it celebrates its fortieth edition: what with Mussolini, the war, and political upheavals in the 1960s and 1970s, it has had a turbulent career. It has a remarkable eapacity for survival though, and at a time when other festivals seem under threat (Los Angeles Filmex and Manila are both in doubt and a number of smaller festivals seem likely to go under for want of funds), Venice is flourishing, with the return of a former director, the critic Gian-Luigi Rondi.

As the world's oldest festival Venice has always kept a perspective on the past. This year it presents retrospective tributes to Elio Petri and René Clair and the opening gala was the restored A Star is Born, which proves (alongside Napoleon and The Leopard) another of those monuments that overshadow the contemporary cinema. It was a Frank Beyer's The Turning Point, a Polish-East German coproduction, is set just after the war, and is the saga of a young soldier in a Polish prison, who is accused, interrogated and tor-tured by captors and fellow prisoners alike because of a mistaken identity. Beyer is clearly fascinated by the whole apparatus of false accusation but the film probably won official approval in Germany for its moral, currently expedient for the friends in the Warsaw Pact, that though Nazis were bad, it does not do to trust Poles either. The film's release was held up for a year or more by the Poles' understandable official protests at the finished work.

Drawing the wrong conclusions

Kings of Infinite Space, on BBC2 encountered before and which I last night, was a powerfully confused programme almost this slur on Mr Jencks, omoverwhelmingly presented by its writer, Charles Jencks, who had a most insistent North American voice, an obviously unshakeable belief in his own opinions, and a predilection for the phrase that resounds but trails a litter of "Architectural power," he told us early on, nodding to Mao Tse-Tung, comes out of the barrel of a 4B pencil and those who can wield it reign like monarchs over their profession". I presume the "it" meant the pencil, but there must be many surely whose draughtsmanship is superb but whose concepts are flawed to an extent that will preclude them reigning over anything other than a drawing board.

Neither of Mr Jencks's subjects had any such limitation. Both Frank Lloyd Wright, who died in 1959, and Michael Graves, architect of the Portland Building and who Mr Jencks acknowledged as the leader of the post-modero-ist wave, could wield a 4B to some purpose and shared a belief that colour, ornament, and symbolism, abhorred by modernists, had a significant place in architecture.

They wouldn't have agreed about everything. Wa saw the former in some interesting film clips. The latter was with Mr Jencks on his travels and we heard him say that many of his illustrious predecessor's drawings were "overly sweet".

He thought the Guggenheim Museum, completed shortly after Lloyd Wright's death, a place to be seen in rather than a place to see paintings in. Mr Jencks frequently disagreed with Mr Graves and saw some "sup-pressed sexual symbolism" in it, Mr Graves demurred: "Too much, Charles. Again, yoo go 100 far." Fair, I thought, surprised that the dialogue director, a television occupation I haven't

City Editor's Comment

The key question at monetarism's heart

The idea that the American promises disaster. A sharp есоноту should act as a locomotive for the world, dragging the rest of us into forward motion, is anath-ema both to the Reagan Administration and to likeminded monetary economists elsewhere, who are more conscious of the need to fight inflation both worldwide and in each country. But somehow it has turned out that way.

The combination of huge fiscal deficit and, in theory if not in practice, stout monetary aims, has led to remarkable shortterm growth - 9.2 per cent annual rate in the second quarter of 1983 - that has powered lagging progress in Continental Europe and Japan and enhanced our own early but more modest efforts. But has it been too good to be true?

So far, all appears well, with US inflation lower even than our own and sufficiently modest for President Reagan to take credit for US price stability as a proximate cause of the strong dollar.

The idea that inflation and slump or stagnation are continuing alternatives has died the death both in our own election campaign and in the general economic argument. It needed an individualist with clont to revive it. Who better than Mr Milton Friedman, in many ways the architect of the US idea that, given monetary restraint, the budget deficit hardly mattered for inflation?

As ever there are no half measures with Mr Friedman. "Excessive monetary growth over the past year means that we are facing the near-certainty of an over-heated economy for the next few quarters at least, which will almost certainly mean a subsequent acceleration of inflation, probably in middle or late 1984," he writes in a Wall Street Journal column. "Continuation of present reduction in monetary growth would mean reduced nominal GNP growth next year. Combined with the delayed impact on inflation of the recent monetary explosion, the result would be recession . . . there is no middle course that at this point will avoid both higher inflation and at least a decided slowing if not premature termination of expansion".

There can be no doubting that M1, the weekly basic money supply to which the markets and Mr Friedman pay most attention, was so far above targets that Mr Paul Volcker at the Federal Reserve Board was forced to abandon his projected growth range and set a new one, now being met, al-though dealers still have fears for the autumn.

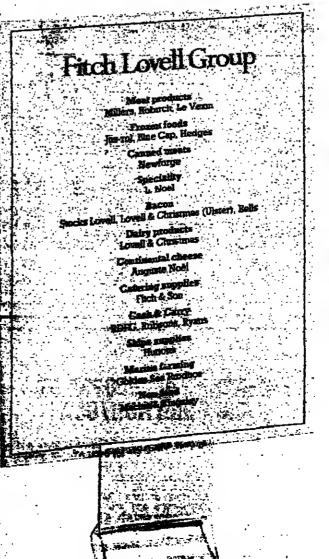

The conventional view is that inflation will rise in the United States next year, but only modestly, to perhaps 5 per cent, still lower than the OECD average.

The real question, highly relevant here and at the heart of arguments about monetarism, is whether unduly high monetary growth in the early stages of recovery - what the technicians call falling velocity of circulation - is consistent with that elusive desirable, the switch to stage-two sustainable economic growth.

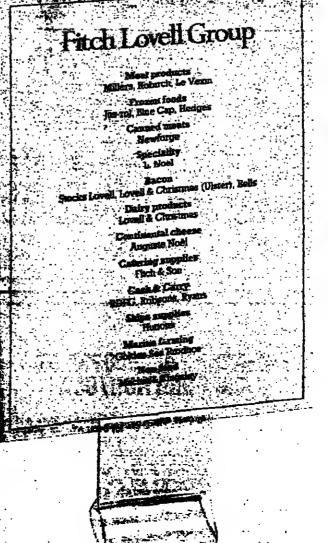

According to Mr Friedman, whose researches in this area are second to none, there is a cyclical fall in velocity of circulation in the downturn that should reverse when things improve. Experience here suggests that the credit and bouse purchase in the early stages of recovery simply need more money.

The Heath recovery showed this transition was hard to bridge. The denonedetermine will ment whether the upturn will prove to be just another financial cycle or a longerterm economic recovery.

company. Last week he left his Government on the contentious privatization of British Gas's oil concern until Mr Peter Walker, the Secretary of State for Energy, decides how and when it should assets for the past three years.

The new company has a skeleton staff of 10 at the moment, backed up by outside consultants. "The assets are here," Mr West said. "Now they have got to be turned into a viable company and made attractive to future investors."

Although the company is oot West, aged 33, was a high-flying as private secretary to three the technical operator of any of civil servant at the Department of successive Secretaries of State for the North Sea oilfields in which it has stakes, it has to be represented on the operating committees. No announcement has yet been made about the form or timing of

Fed keeps up tight money control

The Federal Reserve's squeeze on money growth remains fully in force and this is likely to lead to a rise in bond prices and s weakening of the

It is now 10 weeks since there was any increase in the level of "adjusted reserves" of the American banks. The rate of growth of the adjusted monetary base (banks' reserves plus currency) has slowed to s crawi in the week ending August 31; the monetary base actually declined by $100m.

An indication of the potential for change when the financial markets gain more confidence came on Friday, when the Fed announced s fall in M1. Before revisions, by a startling $1.6bn. Compared with the "consensus" forecast of a rise of about announcement, the beliwether 12 per cent 2012 Treasury Bond rose from 100 10/32 before the announcement to 101 20/32.

The dollar also fell on the news. Late dollar rates in the Unites States, compared with last Thursday's included: DM2.6675, down from DM2.7010; FFr8.0750, 2.1935 yen 245.70, down from 247.08. There are more and more indications that the slowdown in money growth is affecting the pace of advance of the United States economy. Chief indications are:

 Lower July housing starts.
 Lower July new home sales. Index of leading indicators for July rose on 0.3 per cent, against a rise of 1.9 per cent in June and 1.2 per cent in May.

falling in July.

Initial claims for memployment insurance bave risen sharply in the past two weeks for which figures are available.

The expectation now is that the US is going to experience a huge overseas trado deficit this year and again in 1984.

This trade deficit is the reflection of the high level of US interest rates, which have raised the value of the dollar. Thus, the strong dollar, which has been severely criticized in Europe, is actually a substantial boon to European exporters. America has suffered a severe setback in its export trade and al the same time has permitted a huce inflow of imports.

These measures, all part of the phenomenon of the strong dollar, have permitted other exports to expand their share of world trade at the expense of In turn, the strong dollar has exercised an important drag on the forward movement of the American economy. As the money slowdown gathers force in the second balf of September and through October, interest rates in the US will fall. This will lead to a weakening of the dollar. In turn, American exports will experience more success in world markets and US imports will be inhibited. Thus, the Federal Reserve's policy of money slowdown, now in force since May, will help indirectly to stabilize the economic olowdown which will be the direct effect of its

In the past the foreign trade sector was not as important to the US. But today exports represent 10 to 12 per cent of gross national product.

Now that money growth is slowing to a halt, the foreign trado sector will help to moderate the deflationary mpact of the policy in force. Maxwell Newton

Kent's hopes flicker and die amid the gloom

The final of the NatWest Trophy at Lord's on Saturday could have been a calamity, seen through the wrong end of a light meter. But thanks to the captains, Botham of Somerset and Tayare of Kent, it provided the usual capacity crowd with s full day's enjoyment, if not with one of the more spectacular finals. Somerset's victory by 24 runs, their fourth in the last five years in a one-day final, was, if anything, more comfortable than

Friday night was so vile and Saturday morning so bleakly unpromising that at breakfast time there was more reason for expecting a blank day than almost a full one. In the event, the start was delayed by only half an hour, while the teams persuaded themselves to take the plunge. and although Kent lost, I doubt whether even they went home regretting they had played. The alternative was to come back today, hy when the natural climax of the occasion would have assed. Tavaré, having won the toss, had the difficult decision of deciding whether or not to field. While wanting his bowlers to take advantage of a grey morning, he knew that if Kent batted second they would almost certainly have problems with the light, Although the match was reduced from 60 overs a side to 50, that in fact is what happened.

At lunch, Kent, especially Dilley, had done well, Somerset being 91 for four with Richards just out. Soon afterwards Botham was also out, caught off a okier at squar leg. Richards seems to play so casually, while others strain and struggle, that when he gets out rather carelessly, as he did now and also in the final of this year's Prudential World Cup, it is as though he is beig sure not to spoil the match. Such were the conditions, so favourable to seam and swing, that Underwood, one of the great one-day bowlers, was not given a single over. As things turned out, Kent might have done better to allow Underwood his full quota of overs and include an extra batsman. It certainly made no sense playing him and then not powling him, even less when the Somerset bowlers to take the wickets which mattered most were Marks and Richards.

No dailying for Roebuck, bowled by Dilley

Needing 194 to win, Kent lost Benson in their first over, for the second wicket Johnson and Tavare added 59. At 60 for one, after 22 overs, Kent were winning at 88 for five, after 31 overs, they were not.

He removed Johnson, Tavare and Cowdrey, Having also scored 29 he made Bob Willis's choice for man of the match fairly uncomplicated. The only other candidates were Dilley and Richards. down the leg side. When Aslett was also smartly stumped on the leg side, it was half of the Kent order to muster more than the first, Baptiste, Knott. Ellison and Dilley, however, all made enough brave hits to keep Kent's hopes flickering. Not until Ellison, batting with a runner after being hit on the knee by Garner, was ointh out at 16.2, did they finally die.

Shattering the bucolic calm

My pleasure in Somerset's win acceptable as such generalizations was marred by the behaviour of the somerset crowd, with their incessant, boring chanting. I know we always say, on these occasions, that it is "only a minority" of supporters who are responsible, but it was a substantial minority.

I should think every non-partisan on the ground was wishing by the middle of the afternoon that Kent would pull it off. When Tavare and Johnson were making the second-wicket stand, I even found myself half-boping it would continue,

Why is it that Somerset followers baye won themselves such an uncaviable reputation? It does not fit the county's public reputation, which is one of bucolic calm. This is not quite true, but after an adult lifetime spent in the West of England, I would think it as here.

We used to say that it was partly due to their being starred of sucess for so long, but they have had a good deal of it in recent years, so the novelty chould be wearing off. I thought it might be partly due to a provincial anxiety to cock 2 spook at Lord's, a defensive assertion that "We's just as good as yon be".

But they also behave badly at Sunday League matches at Taunton (though there has been some improvement recently, thanks to stricter licensing hours). Part of the trouble, I am sure, is that there is no

League football in Somerset. There is no other focus for county sporting interest than the cricket side. There has always been no excitable streak in Somerset's cricket supporters. In their first season in the championship in the 1890s, they had an unexpected win at Taorion against the giants of Surrey, Sam Woods, who had taken the last Surrey wicket with the last pussible ball of the match, wrote that: "This match made Somerset cricket. Our supporters went barmy, threw their hats in the air and hit each other about." The trouble is that nowadays they tend to hit the

in last year's NatWest Trophy final David Thomas, of Surrey, by taking three for 26 against Warwickshire, came near to plying himself into the England team for Australia. Today when the party for this coming winter's tour to Fiji, New Zealand and Pakistan is chosen, Graham Dilley, of Kent, will almost certainly have done so after his four for 29 in Saturday's final against Somerset, although he has been fit enough this season to take only 27 first-class wickets.

Dilley may be numbered with the II others who are virtually certain to go. These are Willis, Cowans and Cook as bowlers, Tavaré, Fowler, Gower, Lamb, Randall and Gatting as batsman, Botham as an all-rounder and Taylor to keep wicket. This leaves three, possibly four places to be filled, the last of them being linked with the wicketkeeping

England are looking, therefore, only for another batsman, possibly an opener, and two more bowiers, on of them fast and one slow, or both slow. For anyone less good than Imran, bowling fast in Pakistan is a soul-destroying occupation. In New Zealand, where the hall moves about off the seam, accurate medium pace is useful. Foster and Thomas could be expected to have a less successful tour than Neil Williams, of Middlesex, or Pigott, of Sussex, who has a conspicuously good record playing for Wellington in the Shell Trophy (formerly the Plunket Shield). Pringle is a candidate again, although his no-balling has to count against him, and Allott will probably get a mention. When Christopher Cowdrey becomes a steadier bowler he could well fill a place. # world record again

Steve Ovett reclaimed the world 1,500 metres record yesterday, one work after his previous record had been broken by Sydney Maree, of the United States. Overt ran 3min 30.78 sec to win the 1,500 metres at the independent meeting at Rieti, central Italy. His time was just less than half a second better than Marce's 3min 31,24 sec which had been set in Cologne last Sunday.

Overt was much more decisive in vesterday's race than he had been in his record attempt in Koblenz four nights before. There, he had waited for pacemaking into the last lap, but on a sunny and slightly hlustery afternoon in Rieti, Overt followed David Mack, of the United States, through the first kilometre, and then struck out on his own.

Overt passed the bell for the last lap in 2min 35sec, and strode on alme through the 1,200 metres in a time of 2min 49.12sec. He increased his lead during the last lap, and crossed the line, about 30 metres in front of his pursuers, in 3min 30.78sec.

Overt was rightly exultant after he crossed the line and saw his new world record ome. For it was exactly a week previously that Sydney Maree, the South African who is awaiting United States citizenship, had broken Ovett's former world record of 3 min 31.66 sec.

Oddly, the little stadium in Rieti is the only place where Maree has ever beaten Ovett - in a mile race two years ago. Maree was third in vesterday's Fifth Avenue Mile in New York.

Ovett had originally planned to miss the race in Rieti, but after a dissatisfying race in Kohlenz, where he had set his former world record three years ago, he decided to go to ltaly after all. He more than justified his decision.

He proved to himself and to the rest of the world that he is far from a rest of the world that he is far from a spent force. There was much speculation after his uncharacteristically subdued race in the world championships, when he was placed fourth behind Steve Cram, that Overt's ten-year reign as, possibly, Britain's best competitive athlete in history was coming to an end. istory was coming to an end.

Steve Cram, the world champion, won a 1,500 metres race in Kharvik, Norway, yesterday in 3 min 33.06 sec. Cram's time was one of the best of the year, but he was upstaged by Ovett's run later in the day. In New Yurk, Steve Scott, of the United States, won the Fifth Avenue Mile in 3 min 49.77 sec. GOLF

Ovett has Aoki wins European Open from Faldo and Ballesteros

Golf Correspondent Isao Aoki drew away from Nick Faldo to win the European Open championship, sponsored by Pana-sonic, at Sunningdale yesterday. With a fourth round of 69, one under par for the Old course. Aoki achieved a total of 274, six under par. Faldo took 71, exceeding the par of 70 for the first time, and dropped down to a share of second place on 276 with Severiano Ballesteros (a blistering 64 yester-day) and Carl Masoo (68). For all the trumpeting it received on television, whose interest was of course vested, the tournament was curiously lacking in atmosphere for much of the day. Perhaps the realization that Faldo was not playing well enough to win - in the circumstances his 71 was a triumph of will over wilderness - and that Ballesteros had started the day too far behind muffled the competitive

At it turned out, Ballesteros could afford to give Faldo seven strokes start, but not Aoki, once the Japanese had exorcised the indis-Japanese nad exorcised the indis-cretions that caused him to drop shots at the second and fifth. Thereafter he was precision its Oriental self as he reeled off 12 par figures interrupted only by a free three at the short par-four minth.

This is bound to be a severe disappointment for Faldo, with such a big lead before play began and a hurning anxiety to get back to the United States as soon as possible in order to win enough money there to retain his exempt status. He has been given 24 hours special dispensation to reconsider his decision not to play in this week's lucrative Swiss Open because of a family wedding. family wedding.

Ballesteros revealed afterwards that he had been so unwell on Friday that he had considered withdrawing. Yesterday the hug clearly was still upon him but it did oot prevent him from playing another superlative mund of golf.
With only a little more luck he could have been several shots better.
As it was, he turned on the heat coming home with four hirdies, holing with characteristic panache a six-yarder underneath the home green grandstand finally to frustrate Faldo.

Faldo, who was troubled by a hook from the moment he struck a spectator on the second, had a last chance to draw clear to second place with a putt of 10 feet on the 17th hut it cruelly rimmed the hole. That one stroke cost him £5,130 in prize money and increased Ballesteros' share by £2,600. The difference of £7,730 may figure large before the eason is over,

Although Aoki had to survive the last four holes with only a two-stroke lead over Ballesteros in the rlub house, regardless of what Faldo and the admirable Mason might do in between, there never seemed any likelihood of him surrendering the advantage.

A hunkered three-iron to the 226yard 15th cast a momentary doubt, but as is his habit he came out close enough for a single pun. Thereafter it was more a question whether or not he could draw further ahead, but his hirdie putts on the loth and 17th narrowly failed, His extraordinary swing, which would win first prize at any woodchoppers' ball, clearly works well for him, even at 41.

FOOTBALL: THE FIRST DIVISION GETS ITS FIRST FEEL OF SYNTHETIC TURF Rangers adjust to the elite? with a contentious bounce

A new furnishing, the wall to wall carpet, was introduced to the first division on Saturday.

Queen's Park Rangers, who thought they had heard the last on the subject of fresh decor are beginning to discover that the debate is far from over, particularly if they gain a place in Europe next

That is already a possibility. Consider the record of Rangers on their synthetic turf. Aston Villa were their fiftieth opponents and the thirty-seventh to be defeated. In losing only four of those matches, Rangers have scored 111 goals and conceded a mere 29. Impressive statistics but it would be a mistake to consider them a "home" team.

On the contrary, on their way to the second division championship last season, Rangers were the most successful away side in the top two divisions. More significantly, their astate manager, Terry Venables, is convinced that his players now believe they belong among the highest class. Their confidence has arrived in less than four hours.

confidence has arrived in less than four hours.

"They were scared during the first half hour against Manchester United at Old Trafford."

Vensbles said, "but they came off knowing they can compete with the best, We haven't picked up many points but I've been very happy with the way we've played." He can have few complaints about Saturday's 2-1 win. Villa, the former European champions, were outplayed.

Tony Barton, Villa's manager, admitted that "but for Spink the match would have been over by half-time." He knows that he might then have had the arduous task of lifting a side six goals behind. But for Fillery's precise cross and Stainrod's clean finish in the fifth minute, Spink would have raised Villa's optimism even higher than they deserved.

His saves from Allen, twice, and Stainrod were notable enough but his feat on the half hour almost notable enough but his feat on the half hour almost defied belief. With three simple nods of the head, Mocklewhite, Gregory and Allen released Neill on course for a contender for the goal of the season.

Spink touched the low drive on to one post and recovered in time to stop it bouncing in off the other.

The conditions were awkward anyway (the wind tugged fiercely at the flags above the stand but left almost untouched a stray balloon below). The bounce, still as lively as that of a pin pong ball, made them more so. McMahon, Curbishley and particularly Walters, found them close to impossible. Villa's midfield was therefore largely inoperative at least until after the interval. But, as they were closing the gap in superiority, their own centre forward, Withe, inadvertently widened the difference in the score. A looping back header from a throw-in, it was his first goal of the season.

Withe added his second in the final minute when Hazeil, who had otherwise dominated him, waylaid a back pass. Withe will have noted that Mariner, one of his main challengers as the leader of England's attack against Denmark in a fortnight has yet to fail in his aim for Ipswich Town.

Rangers have spent the last six weeks putting sand on to the surface to deaden it. Was that to make the bounce more consistent, Venables was asked. "It always has been consistent," he replied. "High", Whereas Rangers are clearly accustomed to it, Villa were not. Nor will those visitors that follow

Currently, first division sides need adapt to the carpet for only 90 minutes a season but they may have to wear slippers for three hours if Luton Town's ambitions to move to a new sporting complex in Milton Reynes are realized. The plan, timed to take place in 1985, is, however, far from Luton expected their supporters to raise bjections at their tiny Kenilworth Road ground on Saturday. David Pleat, their manager, was relieved to see that the only demonstrations were those of joy of his own players. They moved up to fifth place and took over as the division's leading goal scorers with their 4-I win over Sunderland.

Cheiaea may have maximum points but their followers let the side down at the Goldstone Ground where the pitch was invaded at the end and four policemen; were injured. Mike Bamber Brighton's chairman, called for those responsible to be "jailed for at least five years" and Ken Bates, his counterpart at Cheiaea, agree with him that "the government must do something about such hooligans". Have we heard that plea before?

West Ham success due to excellent tradition

West Ham .....

The sight of West Ham United at the top of the first division is a reassuring one for those of us who still cling to the belief that successful teams can also be entertaining. Admittedly, three wins in the first three games of the season is success of a fairly limited kind, but there was enough evidence at White Hart Lane on Saturday to suggest that the pre-minence of West Ham need not be short-lived.

Their manager, John Lvall, has a The sight of West Ham United at

With six minutes left, Kannedy cleared quickly to Dalglish near the halfway line. A moment's heatation would have allowed Forest to. not be short-lived.

Their manager, John Lyall, has a pleasing attitude to the development of his team, seeing it as part of a historical process in which the club's traditional virtues of daring, inventive play are upheld. For example, of the second goal on Saturday, Lyall did not enerely say that it was very good, which it was, but that it was "the kind we like to be identified with".

The key to the read a indeed, the West Ham displayed on addition-al, transpected characteristic, which Lyall euphemistically referred to as "commitment." They needed to, for until conceding a second goal in the thirty-niath minute, Tottenham had run the same. Even after it, they run the same. Even after it, they continued to enjoy most of the possession, but to ever diminishing

The loss of the injured Hoddle just before half-time resulted in an over simplification of tactics; where Galvin and Roberts had once moved forward with real menace, they now maranded with all the subtlety of prop forwards. Hardly a shot was tried from less than 25 yards out.

Celtic win thriller

The creative ability of Paul McStay, whose first figure bore a charmed life in the snap and snart of electrifying old firm conflict, provided Celtic with a goal which gave them the narrowest of victories in the close encounter at Parkhead.

With only four minutes to go and the score at 1-1, a fair reflection of the match, the class of the elegant the match, the class or the engan-teenage midfiled player glowed in the frantic fray. McStay cut out a pass intended to start a Rangers' assault, in turn directed a superb ball to the foot of the maurauding McClair and saw his inspirational move end with McCarvey prodding the ball into the net after McClory had palmed-out McClair's cross. It was a game to delight the 50,000 spectators who relished the tensions, fierce physical exchanger and hysterical action of the old firm kind. # New heroes and heroines start chasing the old favourites From Rex Bellamy, Tennis Correspondent, New York

Kevin Curren and Tracy Austin were not fit enough to compete and Guillermo Vilas, José-Luis Clerc, José Higoeras, Gene Mayer, Andrea Temesvari, Barbara Potter, Kathy Rinaldi, Claudia Kogde and Virginia Ruzici were all beaten in the first three rounds. Heinz Gunthardt beat Mayer by the startling margin of 6-1, 6-0, 6-0 in 65 minutes last Saturday evening. Gunthardt, aged 24, has regained his form, after eighteen months or so of disappointing results in singles.

His enviable talent came to full flower against Mayer, whose game tends to be as unpredictable as his fitness. Gunthardt was on target with 73 per cent of his first services and, in general, hit so hard and so deep that Mayer - who in any case has little tasse for floodlit tennis was too hurried to find his rhythm. Mayer plays two-handed on both flanks. Miss Jaeger led 6-2 and 5-2 against Miss Jausovec but then became untidy, was pinned on the ropes by an increasingly assertive opponent, and ultimately owed something to the fact that in the decisive tie-break the little Yugoslav was inhibited by cramp.

The most unexpected result in the women's singles occurred when Miss Temesvari was beaton 6-4, 6-0 by Pascale Paradis, of France. Both are aged 17, with Miss Paradis two

Jones the sponsor Tom Jones, the singer, is to sponsor the London Welsh rugby tournament at Old Deer Park oo October 9. Twelve teams are to take part in the competition.

This year's fascinating World Cup, sponsored by Three Fives, which started sensationally with the defeats of both Chinese players, ended with intriguing twists among the results here early yesterday. Mikael Appelgren won the tourna-ment, repeating the victory over his teenage compatriot Jan-Ovo Waldo-er, which he had had in the European final in Budapest last Gay Kelleway gained her tenth victory sioce turning professional in June when Pretty Picture beat Bean Boy by one and a half lengths in the Goldeo Grain Hambleton Cup at Thirsk on Saturday. Miss Kelleway will not know how her actual score, however, until a Jockey Club inquiry tomorrow resolves the controversial question of her correct riding allowance. She may lose four riding allowance. She may lose four winners because, having ridden 10 winners as an amateur, she was poly entitled to claim 5th and oot 7th.

three places. This acheivement may not be equalled for a long time. Not only did England's teenager. Carl Prean, finish sixth to equal his remarkably high position to the Norwich Unioo Masters in Jamaica in June, but he completed three wins over players in the world top 20 and finished by giving 10 points start in the final game to the former world champioo, Istvan Jonyer, and nearly overhauling him.

The Times Guide to career choice

Stop being mesmerized by degree courses and take time to descover what else higher education can offer. One of the encouraging mends of recent years is the renewed interest in vocational courses. But this interest has been targely concentrated on degree courses in subjects such as law, accountancy and some of the engineering disciplines. Now, however, it is worth taking a wider view and considering the alternatives.

... The reason is that from this autumn ne reason is that from this automa and Technician Education Council (BTEC) – is being formed to put some weight behind the non-degree sector of higher education, Do not be alarmed if BTEC is completely unfamiliar to you. It is springing from the union of two highly respected bodies - the Business Education Council and the Technician Education Council - which for almost a decade have been building up a solid reputation in industry and commerce for delivering first-rate qualifications. They remained largely unknown to the public, who often stumbled across them public, who often stumbled across them only, when their children came a cropper at A-level and were looking around for an academic safety-net.

With the setting up of BTEC, however, this alternative form of higher education is staking a claim to be equal in, but different from, the traditional degree course, and to offer a qualification which may well be more useful when it comes to getting a job. Hasically, BTEC provides (among other things) qualifications called higher hational diplomas, which require two years of full-time study (or three years in a sandwich course), and count as a in n sandwich course), and count as a mandatory award (in the same way as a degree course). They are available at polytechnics and institutes of higher cation, alongside degree courses.

The whole basis is to prepare students for employment'

Apart from being shorter than degree courses, HND courses require only one GCE A-level (plus supporting O levels) for admission. Partly because of this, under the separate BEC and TEC regime, the courses have often been wiewed as second best for those students who flunked out at A-level. But changing times and attitudes have meant that BTEC highers are unlikely to suffer the same fate:

"There is a new realism about education and training these days", Mr

John Sellers the recently appointed. Chief Executive of BTEC, says. People have seen that not all graduates are able to find jobs and that a degree is no longer a passport to employment. Consequently they are now examining more selectively where a qualification can lead in career terms. As a result, more people are starting to investigate

The last of four articles by Edward A. Fennell on courses outside the universities what our higher diplomas can offer."

The proof of this is that admissions tutors for some HND courses are now requiring two A levels for entry although strictly speaking only one is necessary. Moreover, whereas some courses had places going begging they are now filling up first.

"The whole purpose of our courses is to prepare the students for employment", John Sellers says. "Degree courses have other objectives so if their students end up unemployed they can't really complain. But we are failing in our task if our higher national diplomants do not get fixed up in

The relevance of the BTEC courses can be seen from the fact that over the past nine years BEC and TEC have drawn many of their students from industry and commerce on a part-time basis. The part-time certificate and the full-time diploma are essentially the students. rame although the full-time courses, obviously cover a wider stretch of ground. But because of the extremely close links that REC and TEC, and now BTEC, leave with industry everyone is confident that the courses are providing what employers require.

"Our courses are structured in such a way that they can be changed easily and quickly to incorporate new material or to meet the changing needs of employers", Mr Sellers says: "We are very rensitive and responsive to what is going on in the outside world and this has been particularly important in fields like Information technology where, at the moment, there is need for almost annual up-dates."

The range of subjects provided by BTEC is very wide. Because it provides vocational qualifications virtually every career which has a "profession level is covered by it. On the scientific and technological side there are, among many others, courses in electrical and electronic engineering, plant process and control engineering maritime studies and road transport, building studies, dental technology, hotel and catering, and graphics and printing. Meanwhile in connexion with business and commerce the list of career specialisms covered extends from advertising and data processing, through travel and tourism, marketing. and industrial relations, again, the flexibility of the BTEC system allows it to target itself very precisely on to the precise requirements of employers.

But BTEC is keen to maintain high academic standards. John Sellers is happy that the new realism is bending people's minds towards the value of vocational qualifications. But he does not intend to neglect the educational status of the higher diplomas. "We mustn't allow the pendulum to swing too far in the other direction", he says. Consequently the higher awards are being brought increasingly in line with the academic standards of the professional bodies. Amidst those now recognizing the awards are the Chartered Institute of Transport, the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, the Institute of Biology and the Royal Institute of Chemistry. A drive is now taking place to secure arrangements with some of the prestige bodies, particularly in the fields of engineering and accountancy. It is also possible in many instances to transfer from HDN courses to a degree course.

They are not the back door to a degree'

But BTEC is anxious not to project its courses as a backdoor to a degree. Instead, it is confident that because students and their parents have started to scrutinize higher education much more carefully for career-relevant courses, the assets of a BTEC course will now be much better appreciated.

"Our courses are soundly based in educational terms, and firmly geared to the employment needs of the 1980s and '90s", Mr Sellers says. For those who have never fancied themselves in an ivory tower BTEC may be the answer.

For advice about BTEC contact your local advisory officer through the offices of the Careers Service. For an information sheet about BTEC send a stamped, addressed envelope, (A4 size) to Career Horizons (BTEC) The Times, Room 137, 200 Gray's Inn Road, London W.C1X 8EZ.

In addition, the following leaflets are also available: The Polytechnics, Autumn 1983, a guide to full-time and sandwich courses: SAE marked Career Horizons (Polytechnic). The Institute of Higher Education: SAE marked Career Horizons (Higher).

A-level students who have just received their results will also be interested in a new guide from CRAC Publications Jobs and Careers after A levels. The author, careers officer Mary Manro, looks at A levels in perspective, examines where A-level jobs can be found, gives a brief guide to job-hunting and selection, and highlights the Alevel training courses available. She also provides more than 40 case studies of how A-level applicants found jobs as anything from bank clerk to merchant seaman, surveyor to policeman and civil servant to photographer.

Copies are available at $2.90 plus 55p, from Alison Pearson, CRAC Publications, Hobsons Press (Cam-bridge), Bateman Street, Cambridge Educational Courses that the Corleone saga now begins TONIGHT'S PROM at the beginning. Coppola has knitted together both his Oscar-winning Godfather films, managing to restore about sixty minutes of cut footage into the bargain. Sensing an audience-clasping event, the BBC is stripping all four newly-edited parts between now and Friday right. But such demand on our time is rewarded by a much more cohesive fluent and sustained epic with nearperiect work from a superlative cast led by Robert De Niro and Marton Brando as the young and old clansman Vito Corleone, for whom organised violence is a Family affair. Al Pacino and James Caan (his sons), Robert Duvall (a gangstr with a briefcase instead of the traditional violin variety), Lee Strasberg, Diane Keaton and Talla Shire bring the story up to date later in the week. 6.30 Cuote, ...Unquote, With Cella Haddon, Ludovic Kennedy, Dr. John Rase, and Colin Welland (r). 7.00 News: The Archers. 7.20 Start the week with Atan Whicker!

Israeli convoys retreat

south from the Chouf in Operation Millstone accurately and appropriately translated from the Hebrew as "Millstone", Israel yesterday abandoned some 230 square miles of Lebanon with a speed which reflected national disen-chantment with the more grandoise aims of last year's war.

Although the pull-back had not been scheduled to begin until dawn, as early as 10.30pm on Saturday night the Star of David had already been lowered over many hard-won positions in the Chouf Mountains. The retreating convoys made their way through the darkness with green taillights to distinguish them in case of ambush.

By morning, scores of armoured vehicles were lining the beach North of Sidon, their crews should Israel bear responsibility?

"No more than for the values in Cambodia or Argentina", he replied sharply. "I mean, why should Israel bear responsibility? impatiently waiting to be evacu-ated by the same cumbersome landing-craft which had ferried them there fifteen months ago. Frogmen ringed the boats and Israeli jets flew regular patrols

A few miles further North on shattered outskirts of Damour, we could clearly see the clouds of dust thrown up by the heavy shelling which followed Israel's twice-postponed departure. The air was heavy with the crump of artillery fire, and the area resembled a no-man's-land with no sign of any replacement forces to take over.

Whatever the Begin Government may have wanted, there was no way of disguising the relief among the hundreds of soldiers convenient piece of military jargon used to describe what was in effect a hasty 20-mile retreat to anti-terrorist drive" in the 1.080 the border.

We are all very happy to be saying goodbye to the Chouf, explained a beaming 19-year-old private from Haifa. "Of course, we are worried what will bappen we are worried what will bappen now to the Druze and Christians, but that is not our war." The weary looking crew of bis armoured personnel carrier nodded emphatically.

approachable from the North by only three main crossing points, a natural defence barrier which has added to the impression of a long-lasting partioon. Bearing in mind the fate of the territory conquered from Jordan in 1967, this part of Lebanon has now been dubbed by Israeli doves as "Begin's North Bank".

Although more consolidated and easier to defend, the reduced area under occupacion is still fraught with danger. This was brought home to us with uncomfortable force yesterday as we drave back towards Israel with a retreating column of tank yesterday that it was in the outside world that the Kremlin should be damaged for the appalling crime of shooting down an unarmed civilian airliner. The Russian leadership, for whom amorality is a basic code of behaviour, is unlikely to be abashed, by printests. The Soviet people, living in the case of a closed police state, are unlikely even to hear of them," the paper com-mented.

The papers

South Korean airliner over Soviet Asian territory last week occupied many leading articles in both the tic and foreign press at the weekend.

The Observer insisted that this brutal act" should not be allowed to hold up the development of arms limitation talks. "Indeed, the more international tension is reduced, the more chance there is of preventing a repetition of the Sakhalin disaster.

China's communist party news-paper, the People's Daily said yesterday that the Soviet attempt to cover up the downing of the airliner only adds fuel to the flame of international indignation, it is intolerable conduct," the paper said in a commentary from Washington

The New York Times said of the disaster: A measured response requires proper measure of the Soviet offence: a callnus attack on innocent international travel and commerce on which the Soviet Union also depends. An aroused world should now give notice that Soviet avisoon and shipping cannot enjoy innocent passage while those of other nations are put at risk by murderously excessive Soviet security operations.

President Reagan appears deter-mined to lead such a campaign even as he persists in weary pursuit of other agreements with the Kremlim. Thus to build on tragedy is the meaning of civilization.

Nature notes

After the corn is cut, rooks and jackdaws search the stubble; flying systematically from one field to the ext. House-sparrows throng the hedges where stray beads of corn have been left. Some farmers have have been left. Some farmers have begun to plough: this brings in the black-beaded gulls, who follow the plough as though it were a ship. Besides eating worms and leather-packets (the larvae of the daddy-loug-legs), they sometimes carch field-mice turned up by the ploughshares. Kestrels and little owls also come to the ploughing, pheasants stalk through the grass at the field's edge.

Many high hedges are completely covered with traveller's joy, or old man's beard: the greenish flowers are giving way to the fluffy seeds. Hedge woundwort is still in flower in staget cross; and valerian is n shady spots; red valerian abundant on old walls and the side of quarries. Horse-chestnut leave are patterned with green and yellow dead brown leaves are crumbling to dust uoder the limes.

Field grasshoppers sing in chorus in the dry grass, rubbing their hindlegs against their wings; great green bush-crickets chirp in nettles and brambles – their method is to rub their hard forewings together. DJM
